5 Carroll Convicts Held in Cobb For Peek Deaths Quiz

Quintet of Prisoners Removed From Camp at Carroll for Questioning by Grand Jury Today.

SOLICITOR REFUSES TO DISCUSS MOVE

Bodies of Couple Were Discovered in Deep Rail- road Cut on June 21.

Five Carroll county convicts were transferred from the Carrollton jail to Marietta last night to be questioned today by the Cobb county grand jury in connection with the rope slayings of J. Ed Peek and his bride.

The jury convened yesterday with J. A. Benson as foreman.

Transfer of the convicts was shrouded in secrecy.

Authorities refused to divulge reasons for the transfers.

The convicts held in jail at Marietta to face the grand jury are:

Lewis Turner, convicted in Carroll county on an auto theft charge. He was sentenced from five to ten years.

Henry McGuire, sentenced to ten years on a sex charge.

Leonard Leach, from Douglas county, sentenced on a sex charge.

Jason Clark, sentenced to life imprisonment from Carroll county on conviction of killing Joseph Cook on a Carrollton street.

Charles Steel, serving an indeterminate sentence on a larceny charge.

The shift of these prisoners from Carrollton to Marietta is believed to indicate the long-awaited solution of the baffling Peek slayings is near. The bodies of the Peeks were found beside their battered automobile in a deep railway ravine near Austell on the morning of June 21.

The felons were said to have been transferred by George McMillan, Cobb county deputy sheriff, and Lee Strickland, another Cobb county deputy. They were assisted by E. C. Ward, Cobb county patrolman, it was said.

Mystery entirely shrouded the rapidly moving events late last night with authorities clamping a stern lid of secrecy on the movements of the prisoners.

Solicitor H. G. Vandiver, of Cobb county, contacted at his home in Canton, declined to make a statement, beyond that the grand jury would investigate the Peek slayings.

Officials of Carroll county said they had no knowledge as to the motives for the transfer of the convicts.

It was pointed out that the transfer was probably ordered by the Cobb county solicitor and that he obtained subpoenas for the five prisoners from the grand jury.

Unusual activity was in evidence about the Cobb county jail throughout the night. Officers were on the move, but none would give an inkling as to their activity.

The reports were compiled by Bureau of Internal Revenue and Treasury experts and are for the guidance of administration officials in the spend-lend program and in determining fiscal policies.

The reports showed that Georgia paid $33,664,958 to the government in federal taxes and received $26,429,781 for relief purposes.

The reports showed that all forms of internal revenue taxes for the year, which ended June 30, totaled $5,658,385,125 as against $4,653,195,315 during the 1937 fiscal year, while emergency relief outlays totaled $2,001,240,000 as contrasted with $2,860,508,392 the preceding year.

Writer's Ashes Will Be Scattered
At Sea, on Hill, in Field, on Street

NEW YORK, July 18.—Peggy Wood, the actress, came home today from London to give John Van Alstyne Weaver, her writer husband, the last service he had asked.

In a poem full of pity—"When I'm All Through"—Weaver had asked his people not to "go sticking me in no stuffy cemetery lot."

Instead, he wanted his ashes divided in four parts and scattered on a sunny hilltop, on the water, in the fields, and underfoot.

She will find a "sunny hill" near their home in Connecticut, she said, for the "first ashes." The sea is not far away and so she will.

Take the second ashes down to the ocean; And when the waves come pilin' up to the beach.

Scatter 'em where the green starts to get foamy.

They used to sing me songs about havin' a nerve.

And never gettin' tired or givin' in— Let 'em run, and take me with 'em.

Near South Stamford, where the ashes await her, Miss Wood said there were broad fields, so the third part will be easy.

And the third part, you go out to the country.

Into some wide, long field and spread 'em round.

Maybe they'll help the grass to climb a little.

The toughest part she ever has played will be when she takes the remaining ashes:

... Down where there's the thickest crowds, right in the city.

And when nobody's lookin', give it a sling.

Onto the sidewalk, underneath their feet. The pore things, always hootin' it along. Somewhere, they don't know where, And I don't either.

Miss Wood said she did not know when she would do this.

"When I do," she said, "no one will see me. I will be all alone."

She was brought to the hospital by her husband, the third son of President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Roosevelt has been staying recently at the home of her parents at Owl's Nest, near Wilmington, Del., where she was married on June 30, last year.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt now have seven grandchildren.

O'Connell Says F. D. R.

BUTTE, Mont., July 18.—(UP)—Representative Jerry J. O'Connell capped his campaign for Democratic renomination to his congressional seat tonight by claiming that "President Roosevelt told me" to defeat the state organization controlled by Senator Burton K. Wheeler.

"President Roosevelt told me," O'Connell told a mass meeting here on the eve of the primary election, "to go out there and fight like hell to defeat Wheeler's machine so he wouldn't be back in 1940."

O'Connell also hinted that he had the support of Senator James E. Murray. The 28-year-old representative, son of a coal miner, has indicated several times that the administration was behind him, but this was the first time he had said so directly.

N. D. Horton Jailed
In Eatonton Slaying

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., July 18.—(P)—Sheriff W. L. Harrison said today he was holding N. D. Horton, 32, Putnam county commissioner in the Baldwin county jail without bond on a murder warrant issued after the death of R. C. Jenkins, 45, prominent Eatonton attorney.

Jenkins died in a hospital here Sunday from a pistol wound received last Friday night. He was shot in the abdomen when he stopped in front of Horton's filling station in Eatonton.

Sheriff J. L. Paschal, of Putnam county, said Horton told him he shot Jenkins, son of a former speaker of the Georgia house of representatives, in self-defense.

F.D.R. Tells Conference That 'Millions Now Lack Individual Means To Pay for Medical Care.'

PROMPT ACTION URGED AT MEETING

Surgeon General Says U. S. Must Assume Lead- ership To Fight Disease.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(P)—President Roosevelt's committee on medical care proposed tonight that federal, state and local governments spend $850,000,000 a year in a vast new attack on sickness of all kinds.

The proposal was laid before prominent medical men and other leaders composing the National Health Conference. It was widely interpreted as formal notice that high government officials are determined to step vigorously into the field of medicine.

Earlier in the day, the conference heard a message in which President Roosevelt said that "millions of citizens lack the individual

DR. AVEN ADMITS
PROBLEM EXISTS

Medical problems should be left in the hands of medical men, Dr. C. C. Aven, president of the Fulton County Medical Society, said last night.

"There is no doubt that the problem does exist, but we are fighting to let it remain in the hands of medical men and free from politicians and social workers."

"They talk about helping those who lack the individual means to pay for adequate medical care, yet there are thousands who are ill-housed, ill-clothed and ill-fed," he said.

"If you go out and cure malaria and don't provide screens to keep out the mosquitoes you merely travel in a vicious circle."

means to pay for adequate medical care" and that a "co-ordinated national program of action" is imperative.

The conference comes at a time when there has been much controversy about the part the government should play in health activities. One school of thought has issued warnings against "socialized medicine," while another has emphasized what it calls the inadequacies of existing health programs.

Urges Leadership.

Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, told the conference that while there may be a difference of opinion "concerning the role of the federal government in putting medical knowledge to work for the benefit of all citizens" there cannot be any disagreement with the principle "that the federal government must increasingly assume leadership in the study of those great causes of disease and death before which we now are helpless."

Opening the conference, Miss Josephine Roche, chairman of the President's interdepartmental committee on medical care, said the expenditure of $850,000,000 is a gauge of the need now apparent. She asserted it is "imperative that there be no further delay in launching an attack on a broad front."

Cost of Program.

Under the program proposed by the committee the federal government would assume half of the total cost. State, county and local governments would match the federal funds. Some of the money would expand general health services for the benefit of the nation as a whole; some would be spent for the benefit of needy persons only.

Of the total, $705,000,000 would go to expand general public health facilities; to provide maternal and child health treatment centers; to finance the hiring of

There'll Be Plenty of Work for Foreign News- men, Spokesman Says.

BERLIN, July 18.—(P)—Government spokesmen in the last few days repeatedly have intimated important developments were in the offing concerning Czechoslovakia.

German officialdom is watching events in the neighboring republic with most intense interest with the conviction, one official said, that "there will be plenty of work in the next few weeks for foreign correspondents."

They have declined to disclose what the developments might include.

"Whatever may happen in the next days or weeks concerning Czechoslovakia," one authorized spokesman said, however, "there won't be any war."

"There will be provocative acts but at the head of our government is a man who declines to be provoked. Soon the whole world will see who is responsible for the trouble in Czechoslovakia."

Such measures as are contemplated by the Nazi regime in dealings with Czechoslovakia were said to be determined so fully there was no need of Chancellor Adolf Hitler coming to Berlin from his Bavarian mountain retreat at Berchtesgaden.

Hiding Scout Smothers Despite Fight

Youngster Hacks at Lock of Chest in Vain Effort To Get Air.

A 13-year-old Boy Scout was found smothered to death in a brand-new cedar chest at his home, 1237 Oak Grove avenue, S. E., last night. The boy, Jasper Ray Love Jr., had been dead many hours.

Indications pointed to a terrific struggle by the lad to free himself from his "cell of death." He had desperately used his Scout knife in attempts to chisel the lock of the chest.

He was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Ray Love Sr.

Two of five small screws attached to a snap lock which held him imprisoned had been removed. There were marks indicating Jasper had hacked furiously at the lock. Marks also showed the boy had kicked and pounded against the sides of the chest.

Discovery of the body by his father ended a brief and hysterical search for the boy.

His parents, both employed at a hat factory downtown, told police they left for work shortly after 7 o'clock yesterday morning. The lad stood on the porch of their one-story house and waved goodbye.

At about 10 o'clock in the morning, Mrs. M. E. Coleman, of 1246

Envoy Listens With Sparkle in Eye, Takes Him Home for Bath.

BALDONNEL AIRPORT, DUBLIN, Ireland, July 18.—(P)—Douglas G. Corrigan, 31-year-old Californian, eased a battered $900 airplane onto Baldonnel airport today after flying 3,150 unaided miles alone across the Atlantic from New York.

He climbed from the cockpit of his nine-year-old plane into a circle of open-mouthed Irishmen and announced calmly:

"I'm Douglas Corrigan. Just got in from New York."

"It took me 28 hours and 13 minutes."

"Where am I? I intended to fly to California."

No one took seriously his story that he had flown in the wrong direction, but nevertheless he repeated it time and again.

No Radio.

He didn't have a passport, landing papers or maps. He didn't have a radio or any fancy instruments. His expenses totaled $69.60.

But he had $15, an incorrigible grin and his story of a flight in the wrong direction.

It was the most sensational "wrong way run" since the dash of another Californian, Roy Riegels, University of California football player, 60 yards in the wrong direction in the January 1, 1929, Rose Bowl game with Georgia Tech.

Corrigan landed at 2:30 p. m. (8:30 a. m. Atlanta time). He had left Floyd Bennett field at 4:17 a. m. (Atlanta time) Sunday "for California."

No Trouble Expected.

While technically detained here, it was not expected he would encounter much trouble for his unscheduled flight over the Atlantic.

(In Washington, Dennis P. Muligan, chief of the Air Commerce Bureau, said he had postponed the question of punishment regulations provided for penalties ranging from a fine to revocation of a

Crashing Films 90 Per Cent Luck, Asserts Successful Atlanta Actor

Maynard Holmes, Who Plays Juvenile Character Roles, Is in Atlanta To Visit Mother; Will Return to New York City in August.

By LUKE GREENE.
A young Atlanta actor who crashed the rugged walls of Hollywood five years ago and found success in the film colony thinks breaking into the movies is 90 per cent luck.

Maynard Holmes, who plays juvenile character roles, was in Atlanta yesterday visiting his mother, Mrs. J. C. Holmes, who resides in a downtown hotel. He is just back from New York where he played in "The Cradle Will Rock," an operetta.

When Holmes went to Hollywood five years ago he didn't see the inside of a studio for six months. But he waited around and finally got a film test. Then presto! The next day he was signed for a part in "Dancing Lady," with Joan Crawford.

"That's the way it goes in pictures," he said. "It's just one of those things you have to keep after."

He will return to New York in August for his next picture, "One-Third of a Nation." It is a federal theater play which is being adapted to the screen.

Among the pictures in which he has played are "Madame du Barrie," "Satan Met a Lady," "Leathernicks Have Landed," the "Flash Casey" series, and numerous shorts.

Joan Crawford is Holmes' favorite star, since she was the first with whom he worked.

"She's very nice," he said. "We still correspond and sign the names we used in our picture."

Dolores del Rio would be his second choice, while Grant Mitchell was the "most perfect gentleman" he met.

Holmes claims a part in starting the new trend away from elaborate stage scenery. It came about when the government refused to allow "The Cradle Will Rock," which dealt with labor troubles, to open in New York.

The clamoring audience obtained a piano, placed it on the stage, and the actors said their lines standing up in their seats. Then when the show really opened the scenery was largely

U. S. RIGHT TO TAX INCOME CHALLENGED

V. C. Pickering Claims Work With Convict Labor Was Governmental.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(P)—V. C. Pickering, of Chatsworth, Ga., challenged today the right of the government to tax income he received for directing convict labor road projects in Georgia.

He appealed to the board of tax appeals from a $6,393 deficiency claim of the Internal Revenue Bureau for the years 1928 to 1933.

Pickering said his work on the projects must be considered governmental because Georgia law prohibits the use of convict labor by private contractors. Most of the deficiency claim was based on Pickering's income from the Gilmer-Murray highway project.

abandoned because of the success of the first show.

The young actor recalled one unusual incident while he was in Hollywood. He was playing a part in a picture in which he had to throw a brick through a plate-glass window. He was told to throw the brick so that it would not break all of the window, but to his surprise when the brick struck the glass it broke into several pieces while the glass wasn't even scratched.

Holmes is a graduate of Tech High school and later attended Oglethorpe University.

New Grady Head Likes Hospital and Atlanta

Dr. James Moss Beeler Goes Through Busy First Day Here.

By LUKE GREENE.
A busy day greeted Dr. James Moss Beeler, formerly of Spartanburg, S. C., as he took over his official duties as superintendent of Grady hospital yesterday.

Although he did not arrive in Atlanta until late Sunday night, Dr. Beeler was at the hospital early yesterday morning conferring with Dr. Russell H. Oppenheimer, who has been acting superintendent since the resignation of J. B. Franklin.

Later he inspected the hospital, chatting with some of the youngsters in the children's ward, and then called on Mayor Hartsfield at the city hall.

Sitting back in his chair and puffing his pipe, Dr. Beeler, who is 44, laughed when he was asked what policies he expected to pursue in his new position.

"Have you ever gone through the ordeal of moving?" he wanted to know.

Easy to Meet.

"After all, you must remember I just got here Sunday night, and with moving and everything else I've hardly had time to think. Then, too, this is a big hospital and I haven't had a chance to look it over thoroughly. It probably will be six months before I can say what my policies will be."

The new superintendent is easy to meet. His warm handshake and friendly smile make a winning combination. And when he begins to talk his pleasant sense of humor bubbles forth and his smile is transformed into a series of hearty laughs.

Dr. Beeler thinks he has excellent opportunities at Grady. He commented on its good reputation throughout the south and praised its record as an educational center for young doctors.

When the new superintendent had been introduced to Mayor Hartsfield, the latter laughingly remarked:

"Dr. Beeler, I've heard a lot about you and I hope you die of old age in Atlanta."

"Well, I hope you have to pay me a pension," Dr. Beeler replied. "I think that's a very good welcome." Dr. Oppenheimer commented.

Then the conversation drifted into talk of hospital affairs, with Dr. Beeler injecting an occasional humorous remark. The mayor said he hoped the doctor's first impression of Atlanta was good, since the first impression was usually the most lasting.

"I've had a good impression of Atlanta for years," the superintendent declared.

"I want to say all pulling for you and wanting to help you in every way," the mayor assured him.

When Dr. Beeler rose to depart, the mayor congratulated him on his new job and said:

"I want to say that I'm favorably impressed and I'm looking forward to great things down at the hospital. They tell me you have a sense of humor and that's what it takes to get along around here."

Born in Kentucky.

Dr. Beeler resigned as superintendent and treasurer of the Spartanburg General hospital and as director of the county health department to accept the Atlanta position. He was born in Clinton, Ky., and is a graduate of Clinton College and the University of Louisville Medical College, Louisville, Ky.

From 1918 to 1920 he was assistant physician at Middleton State hospital, Middleton, Conn. In 1920 he came to South Carolina as director of the department of mental hygiene at the South Carolina State hospital at Columbia. He became superintendent of the Spartanburg General hospital in 1925.

Dr. Beeler is living with his mother, Mrs. G. F. Beeler, at 1040 Peachtree street.

Building League Official Voices Opposition at Columbus Session.

COLUMBUS, Ga., July 18.—(P)—Objection to federal low rent housing projects in municipalities having a population of 50,000 or less was voiced today before the 13th annual meeting of the Georgia Building and Loan League by Leo Leader, secretary of the Albany (Ga.) Federal Savings & Loan Association.

Referring to large amounts of federal funds spent in low-rent housing projects where such expenditures are unnecessary, Leader asserted this type project was designed "just to satisfy some politicians."

He called attention to Montclair, N. J., with 42,000 population, where a citizens' committee protested the expenditure of $900,000 for slum clearance.

Leader quoted the committee's protest as stating the project would be detrimental to "the best interests of Montclair" and that it "would upset rents in the districts effected and make the existing housing in the neighborhood less productive and less able to pay taxes."

CITY TO ASK PWA FOR $210,000 FUND FOR WATERWORKS

Plans for Leasing Asphalt Plant Are Held Up in Council.

Authorization for the city to make application for a $210,000 waterworks improvement project was voted yesterday by city council but plans for leasing an asphalt plant for the city were held up in the objections of Councilmen J. M. Bolen and J. Allen Couch. Officials are to apply to the PWA for $210,000 which, with 240,000 the water department will have next year, would be spent in replacing worn-out pumps and equipment at the River and Hemphill pumping stations.

They also will seek a $125,000 VFA landscaping and grading project on grounds around the two plants.

Councilmen Ask Delay.

Couch and Bolen asked delay in deciding whether to lease the asphalt plant owned by Fred T. Bridges but council only voted to sign the lease, with an option to buy, immediately. Thereupon, the two councilmen served notice of reconsideration, which automatically holds up the matter until the next meeting.

Couch objected to manufacturing the asphalt with convict labor, while Bolen urged the proposal be investigated further.

The lease, which officials said would enable the city to procure asphalt at a saving of $1 a ton, was recommended by Clarke Donaldson, chief of the construction department.

Other Actions.

Other actions taken by council included adoption of Councilman John A. White's resolution asking the Georgia Power Company to restore normal bus service in the Eighth street-Argonne avenue section; referred the tax committee's recommendation to reduce business license fees for groceries and meat markets in the top brackets; approved four retail liquor licenses.

Medical specialists when needed, to eradicate tuberculosis, venereal diseases, and malaria; to control deaths from pneumonia and cancer, and to promote mental hygiene and industrial hygiene.

The remaining $145,000,000 would be used directly to build hospitals, maintain free beds, and for special grants-in-aid to increase medical knowledge through scientific research, the committee explained.

Expenditures Necessary.

These expenditures are imperative, it added, because preventive health services are now "grossly insufficient;" hospital and other institutional facilities are inadequate, particularly for persons too poor to pay for them; and one-third of the population is now receiving medical care.

In addition, the report said, methods must be devised to finance, through taxation and individual contributions, programs for spreading the cost of medical care over long periods and for paying compensation to individuals during the time when their normal income is cut off by sickness.

The committee which drafted the program is composed of Martha M. Eliot, of the Children's Bureau; I. S. Falk, of the Social Security Board, and three representatives of the United States Public Health Service.

Directs Drive for Rivers

IVAN ALLEN SR.

Choosing Ivan Allen Sr., Atlanta businessman, as their chairman, supporters of Governor Rivers organized the Fulton County Re-Elect Rivers Club at a meeting last night and laid plans to carry on a vigorous campaign in this county in behalf of the Governor's drive for an indorsement term.

Judge Ralph McClelland, of the municipal court, was named secretary of the organization, and John L. Conner, well-known insurance man, was named treasurer.

The meeting was held at the Ansley hotel. Walter C. Hendrix, county attorney, presided as temporary chairman. Mr. Hendrix explained that because of his affiliation with the county he deemed it inadvisable to direct the Governor's campaign in the county. He pledged his full support to the chief executive, however.

Rivers' Record.

In accepting the chairmanship, Mr. Allen declared that he believed Fulton county would go overwhelmingly for Governor Rivers.

"I am happy to be able to say that Governor Rivers has carried out every pledge he made to the voters in his 1936 campaign," Chairman Allen said. "We expect to re-elect him by a great majority and to help him complete the program he has started so admirably."

Mr. Allen was authorized to name vice chairmen and whatever committees he deems necessary. The club will open offices at the Henry Grady hotel in a few days.

In accepting the secretaryship, Judge McClelland declared he believed the voters of Fulton county were strong in their support for Governor Rivers and added that he felt the organization would have an effect on all of the counties in this area.

"Know What He Can Do."

"I served with Governor Rivers many years ago in the general assembly and I know what he can do for the people of this state," Judge McClelland said. "We have heard a great deal of the fine manner in which he has cooperated with President Roosevelt but we have not heard much of the fine way in which he has cooperated with cities and counties of the state. I believe that the keen interest he has shown in city and county governments is one of the fine things he has done."

More than 100 supporters of the Governor attended the meeting. Short talks also were made by Joe King and H. E. Ivey, railroad leaders, and Frank R. Fling, secretary to the Fulton county commission.

CAMP FOR SENATE CLUB TO BE FORMED

Fulton county friends and supporters of United States Attorney Lawrence S. Camp, New Deal candidate for the United States senate, will organize a Fulton County Camp-for-Senate Club at a meeting here Friday night.

Keneth A. Campbell, Atlanta attorney, is chairman of the committee on arrangements for the meeting which will be held at the Ansley hotel.

Campbell said yesterday that an active organization would be set up. District Attorney Camp is a native of old Campbell county, now a part of Fulton.

CORRIGAN CROSSES ATLANTIC IN 'ERROR'

'Honestly, I Did,' He Tells Evidently Skeptical U. S. Minister.

pilot's license for a foreign flight without permit.)

Airport officials took a look at the American's single-engine plane and shuddered. Hundreds of persons flocked to the airport to see the flyer and his craft.

Corrigan glibly explained how he had made a bee line out over the Atlantic when his destination was California with the words: "My compass went wrong."

He landed his monoplane near a new type, twin-engine plane of the Irish Sea Airways which just was about to hop to London.

Passengers clambered out to look. They whistled and one remarked: "It's a curious looking affair."

But the American didn't think so. He patted his ship and said: "All it needs is a bit of grease. Then it will take me back to New York."

(In an interview broadcast by the Columbia Broadcasting System, Corrigan was asked if he intended to return by plane and stated: "Oh, no. It'll probably be on a boat. I don't know.")

"Forget it," he grinned when they did get around to that. "Really, I thought I was going to California."

Tonight he slept at the home of the American minister, John Cudahy.

He had 320 gallons of gasoline when he left Floyd Bennett airport yesterday, of which about 30 remained when he landed. He carried half a gallon of water and some chocolate cookies.

Corrigan had joined a long list of noted solo trans-Atlantic fliers, including Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, the late Amelia Earhart and the late Wiley Post.

Corrigan's Story.

The United States minister speeded to the airport as soon as he heard of the Californian's arrival. The flyer told him this story:

"The pivot of my compass stuck and didn't come loose until near the end of the flight. I came out instead of heading for California. I didn't have any way of checking my compass for 18 hours."

"I flew between 5,000 and 6,000 feet in banks of clouds. Only in spots did I get a glimpse of the ocean."

"I came into rain and dropped 1,500 feet. But still I didn't see anything to indicate my course. When I got out of the rain I rose to 5,000 feet."

"The first thing I saw near land were some fishing smacks but even then I thought I was off the Pacific coast. It was only when I came over land that I realized I was not over California."

"I could see houses and the layout of the country were different. I crossed from one coast to the other and then went down the eastern coast until I hit Dublin."

"I then headed out for Baldonnel, and here I am. I have no plans for returning to America. But I don't believe I will fly back."

"I had intended to fly across the Atlantic to Ireland and had studied maps—but this time I was heading back to Los Angeles. Honestly."

At these words there was a sparkle in the airman's eyes. There was another in Cudahy's.

"Come on and have a bath and dinner," the minister said. "I have a bed for you at home."

Mechanics tucked the airplane away in a hangar.

Corrigan Inspired by His Hero, Lindbergh

Story of Determined Young Man Reads Like One of Fiction.

NEW YORK, July 18.—(AP)—There's more than a simple dash of devilry in Douglas Corrigan, the New York-to-Dublin flyer. There's something that's a distillation of Irish mockery and the traditional insouciance of the Texan.

That, at any rate, was the way those who know him, even slightly, felt today about him. A bit of wild man, 31 years old, with a fine crop of reddish brown hair, a twinkle in his eye and a habit of chuckling when he says things he enjoys.

He is not given to ballyhoo, and is by no means brash, but unassuming and confident, determined and courageous.

He was born in Galveston, attended Los Angeles High school for four years, and learned to fly in 1925.

Helped Build Lindy's Plane.

He helped with the welding on the Ryan monoplane which Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh flew to Paris in May, 1927, and Lindbergh became at once his hero, all unconsciously giving Corrigan the itch to try a solo trans-Atlantic hop himself with Ireland as his goal.

His parents died when he was a baby and Corrigan went to live with his uncle, the Rev. S. Fraser Langford, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Santa Monica, Cal.; Mrs. Langford, and his grandmother, Jennie Corrigan, 92.

From the clergyman he learned something of navigation. He was reticent, even at home, about his plans.

Unheralded, he came into New York the night before Howard Hughes and his four companions took off on their round-the-world flight. His $900 plane, which has a normal cruising range of 338 miles, had flown in from California in a little less than 28 hours.

Corrigan himself had installed the tanks to give him a fuel capacity of 320 gallons, instead of the normal 35 or 40.

"Corrigan Clipper."

The airport "gang" at Long Beach called the ship "the Corrigan clipper."

"Why, it took Doug 13 days to fly the ship from New York, where he bought it in 1935 for $310," Larry Connor, 27, mechanic who helped rebuild it, said.

"He landed in cow pastures along the route and had to work on the crate at night so he could fly the next day."

"When he got the clipper back to San Diego, where he worked as a welder for the Ryan factory, Doug assembled the ship, trimmed it and recovered it at night."

"He pulled out the 90-horsepower OX-5 motor, traded some stuff for two Wright engines and put the best parts of each into the plane."

Connor described his friend as a "depression aviator."

"He saved money for the flight," said Connor, "he would eat half a pecan roll and drink a half-bottle of milk for breakfast and finish off the rest for supper."

Corrigan's ship, Connor said, carries an experimental license, which must be renewed every 30 days, and the daring flyer found it difficult at times to provide Department of Commerce examiners with satisfactory reasons for a renewal.

When he arrived here, there were jests, without malice, about the plane, and a good deal of astonishment. Corrigan took it all very lightly, and let word get around he was going back to California shortly.

He spent all of last week at the home of Stephen Reich, another flyer, at Hempstead, Long Island, save when he was at Roosevelt field, studying weather maps for the country between here and California.

As the week drew to a close, Corrigan got ready to fly over to Floyd Bennett field, in Brooklyn. He told Reich to keep his spare clothes where they were, that he would be back in a week from the west coast.

"Typical Young Mick."

Kenneth Behr, manager of Floyd Bennett, was impressed by Corrigan as a "typical young Mick." He was a mixture of American daredevilry, sound mental proportions and an apparent indifference to danger. A natural-born flier without nerves, Behr concluded.

But Behr had cause to wonder when Corrigan, passing up all ballyhoo, personally loaded the fuel into his old plane and made ready to take off before dawn Sunday.

Behr got down to the field and said he wouldn't allow a takeoff in the darkness. An unusual idea, Behr said, in a plane without forward vision. So Corrigan waited until dawn and shot off into the reddening east, leaving Behr shaking his head.

At Roosevelt field today the fabled prevailed that Corrigan, indeed, had planned to fly back to California—he had been studying weather maps continuously—and had changed his mind the minute he got into his plane. Before he left he wired the door shut with baling wire as the handle is missing.

Well Known at Field.

He is well known around Roosevelt field, has been dropping in and out of there for the past eight or 10 years—a kind of in again, out again, gone again Corrigan; a chap with little cash at his disposal, spending what he got to keep pace with his aviation interests, working as a mechanic part of the time and giving instruction in flying.

When he brought his ship east a year ago he had no license and couldn't land it at Roosevelt, so he took it to Fitzmaurice field, Massapequa, Long Island.

He never talked much, but somehow his ambition to fly the Atlantic alone became known.

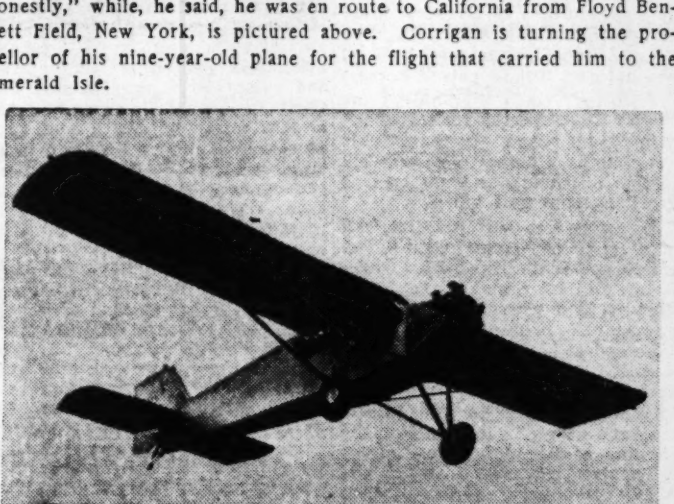

In Ireland today he said he carried some water, chocolate bars and some fig bars. At Floyd Bennett, Behr had said:

"If he had any food with him it must be in his pocket. I didn't see any."

It was discovered tonight that

Douglas Corrigan, who yesterday landed in Ireland "by mistake," while, he said, he was en route to California from Floyd Bennett field, New York, is pictured above. Corrigan is turning the propeller of his nine-year-old plane for the flight that carried him to the Emerald Isle.

Here is Corrigan's 1929 model Curtiss Robin plane, which he purchased in 1935 for $310. Friends say that he skimped on his meals, often making a meal of half a pecan roll and half a bottle of milk, to save money for his ship.

the Advertising Club of New York offered to pay expenses for Corrigan's return from Europe—by boat.

The considerable Irish population of New York rallied to put up any necessary defense Corrigan may need for flying to Ireland without official sanction.

"Congratulations," cabled Charles V. Halley Sr., commissioner of transportation, "on your wonderful flight. If you are in difficulties, be assured there are many thousands here who will be glad to render any assistance possible."

Oil companies' representatives scrambled all over Floyd Bennett field attempting to discover whether Corrigan used their products. . . . He used several brands of fuel and lubrication. . . . One had offered five gallons of oil if Corrigan would sign a release permitting use of his name in advertising. . . . Corrigan refused, offered to pay for the oil and got it free. . . .

Corrigan got his weather reports out of a Saturday evening newspaper, just like you and me.

PRESIDENT CATCHES LARGE YELLOWTAIL

Colonel Watson Lands 60-Pound Grouper To Take Honors.

ABOARD U. S. S. HOUSTON, EN ROUTE TO PANAMA, July 18.—(AP)—President Roosevelt tried out his luck as the nation's first fisherman today and was rewarded with a 38-pound yellowtail.

The big fish nipped at the presidential bait in Magdalena bay, near the tip of Lower California, where the Houston dropped anchor this forenoon.

Honors for the day's biggest catch, however, went to Colonel E. M. Watson, who landed a 60-pound grouper and a large California white sea bass.

Sunny weather and a calm sea greeted the President on the third day of his leisurely vacation cruise after a transcontinental tour during which he spoke in behalf of several New Deal candidates.

Various official messages were exchanged today between the President and government officials. Most of them were of a routine nature.

Miss Helen Keller, noted blind woman who was appointed last week by Mr. Roosevelt to be chairman and civilian member of a committee on the purchase of blind-made products, said she would be unable to accept.

She informed the President that she had found the appointment would require her to attend countless meetings and travel constantly, and because of this she regretfully declined the appointment.

Mr. Roosevelt immediately appointed M. R. Migel, who was recommended by Senator Wagner, of New York, to the committee in place of Miss Keller.

Ex-Governor Talmadge is scheduled to speak from 2 until 3 o'clock with District Attorney Lawrence S. Camp, the New Deal candidate following with the concluding speech of the day.

Candidate Howell, who is seeking the governorship, announced yesterday that because of previous engagements at Dawsonville and Ellijah he would not be able to appear on the Griffin program. He plans to speak at Griffin later. Tomorrow John J. Mangham, of Bremen, and Robert F. Wood, two of Governor Rivers' re-election opponents, are on the program.

Mayor J. A. Cason, of Barnesville, was named chairman of the committee and P. W. Etheridge, of Milner, was named secretary.

HOLY LAND STRIFE BLAMED ON BRITAIN

Irving Jackson, Resident of Jerusalem, Visits Sister in Atlanta.

England's plan to partition Palestine would be a partial solution to the racial strife now raging between the Jews and the Arabs, in the opinion of Irving Jackson, who is just back from Jerusalem after spending five years in the Holy Land.

Jackson, himself a Jew, is visiting his sister, Mrs. Nathan Minsk, of 978 Capitol avenue. He believes England should urge the Arab leaders to live peacefully with the Jews. "Since the Jews are there primarily to live peacefully with them."

"As far as I know, England is directly responsible for all the trouble, for she could have stopped the riots at the outbreak," he declared. "Every one of the uprisings have been easy to quell."

Jackson said it was only in the last two years that the hatred between the two races has been inflamed. He says the Jews are being grossly mistreated.

Asked his opinion of the way his race is being treated in Germany, Jackson replied that little else could be expected of Hitler, "but such practices are not in keeping with England's reputation."

reported to have retained much of the beauty for which she was world-famed. She would have been 63 in October.

Knew Death Was Near.
Queen Marie knew a week ago in a sanatorium in Dresden, Germany, that death was near. She insisted upon being taken back to her beloved Sinaia palace home.

A former court marshal of the Queen was reported to have been dispatched from Bucharest to Dresden post haste in a vain effort to dissuade her from making the dangerous rail journey.

En route she suffered the first of a series of hemorrhages which led to her death. She arrived Saturday on Sunday her condition became worse. She died today at 6:25 p. m.

Bowed at her bedside at the end was King Carol, her son, whose accession in a coup in June, 1930, virtually brought an end to her long and powerful influence in the shaping of Rumania's destinies. The two once had differed bitterly over politics and Carol's red-haired friend, Magda Lupescu, but since they had become reconciled.

Strong Voice in State.
Queen Marie, a granddaughter of England's Queen Victoria, was credited with keeping Rumania on the side of the Allies during the World War when she had a strong voice in the actions of her husband, King Ferdinand.

Upon Ferdinand's death in 1927 she retained this power while Rumania was ruled by a regency. Carol's 5-year-old son, Mihai, taking the throne. This ended with Carol's coup in 1930.

As news of the Queen's death spread all Rumania went into mourning, from prince to peasant. Rumanians particularly loved their Dowager Queen for her ability to "feel and act like a Rumanian despite her English-Russian origin. She was born October 29, 1875, at Estwell Park, Kent, England. She was a daughter of Alfred, second son of Queen Victoria, and the Grand Duchess Maria Alexandrovna, only daughter of Czar Alexander II of Russia.

Nation in Mourning.
The Queen will be buried at the palace of Kurtea de Argesch, 80 miles from Bucharest, next to her husband. The vault there long has been prepared for her. Funeral details have not been settled.

Prime Minister Miron Cristea, who also is patriarch of the Rumanian Orthodox church, administered extreme unction just before she died. He celebrated mass immediately afterward. Then as head of the government he ordered official mourning throughout the land.

All music was forbidden. Theaters, cinemas and other places of amusement were ordered closed until after the funeral. Black flags were flown at half staff from public buildings. Masses were held in churches tonight throughout Rumania.

King Carol and other members of the royal family went into seclusion. Marie was married to Ferdinand in 1893. They had six children, of whom Prince Mircea, the youngest, died in childhood in 1916. King Ferdinand died July 20, 1927.

The others were: Prince Carol, former Crown Prince, born in 1893, who married Princess Helen of Greece; Princess Elizabeth, born in 1894, who became the wife of King George of Greece; Princess Marie, born in 1899, who was married to King Alexander of Yugoslavia.

BANKERS WARNED TO AID RECOVERY

Jones Tells Institutions Start Lending, Get Off 'Sidelines.'

WASHINGTON, July 18.—(UP) Chairman Jesse Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, tonight warned the nation's bankers they must get off "the sidelines" and participate in the recovery drive, or the government will go deeper into the banking business.

In a letter addressed to the heads of all national and state banks, Jones pointed out that the RFC, since the end of February and through July 14, has authorized 2,001 business and industrial loans aggregating $85,344,788. Bank participated in only 302 of these loans in the aggregate of $11,438,444. In addition, Jones said, the RFC has 2,365 applications aggregating $81,618,893 in the course of preparation.

Declaring that the amount of bank participation in loans already made by its agency is "not enough," Jones emphasized that he was not suggesting the banks make "unsound" loans. He said, however, that "in good business morals" a bank should not accept the deposit account of a business, however small, unless it is willing to accord that business credit accommodations reasonably within the requirements of the business when they can be safely extended, "even though it required a little extra trouble to do so."

Jones inclosed in his letter a copy of the new regulations covering investment securities recently issued by the comptroller of the currency and uniform banking examination procedure adopted by the comptroller, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal Reserve Board and representatives of certain state bank supervising authorities. He urged the bankers to take advantage of these changes to co-operate in meeting the demand for business and industrial loans.

"Many banks have realized changing credit requirements and are endeavoring to meet them," he said, "but entirely too many are on the sidelines waiting. . . . You bankers know that with our great abundance of banking resources it should not be necessary for the government to lend to private industry. You should also know that the government will be forced to lend so long as there is a substantial demand for legitimate credit which is not being met."

He told the bankers bluntly that he made a "frank observation of the general trend" when he said recently that if banking is to remain in private hands it must meet the credit needs of the country. He pointed out that a number of bills have been introduced in congress to extend government credit to business in one form or another. He said there is still "persistent talk" about the establishment of industrial banks throughout the country, "at least partially owned by the government," to provide capital for local private enterprises.

Jones reminded the bankers that farmers now get "a great deal of credit" from governmental agencies in the form of seed, crop loans and cattle and livestock loans and that they buy their farm implements largely on time payments. The growth of factoring and finance companies is another indication, Jones said, that banks have not been "particularly wise or energetic" in meeting credit needs.

MISS ALICE CAMP

Burial Will Be in Oakland Cemetery.
Miss Alice Camp, 76, member of a widely-known family and book-keeper for a sewing machine company for many years before her retirement, died yesterday morning at her apartment-home, 95 Merritts avenue, N. E., after a lingering illness.

Surviving are a brother-in-law, B. F. Alphin, and a sister-in-law, Mrs. William Camp, both of Atlanta; two nephews, Julian W. Camp, of New York city, and William M. Camp Jr., of Atlanta, and a niece, Mrs. Gordon Simmons, of Milwaukee, Wis.

Funeral services will be held at 9:30 o'clock this morning, the chapel of Atwry & Lowndes, conducted by Dr. Edward G. Mackey. Burial will be in Oakland cemetery.

In October of the previous year Queen Marie, accompanied by Prince Nicolas and Princess Ileana, came to the United States and during a five weeks' stay made a tour of many of the principal cities. The royal party was received enthusiastically everywhere and at the White House President and Mrs. Coolidge gave a state dinner for them. They sailed for home November 23, their visit somewhat abbreviated because of the illness of King Ferdinand.

Oak Grove avenue, came into the Love home. She is employed by the Loves to come in daily, while they are at work, to attend household duties.

Mrs. Coleman revealed that Ray, as the red-haired, blue-eyed boy was familiarly known, liked to "play jokes on her."

"He would hide somewhere," she said, "either under a bed or in a closet or behind a door, and then jump out at me. He always thought this was great fun."

No Answer.
Mrs. Coleman said that when she entered the Love home yesterday, she called to Ray but received no answer. She said she noticed his bicycle in the house, wondered about his whereabouts, then dismissed his absence in the belief he had either gone with friends or to visit relatives in the neighborhood.

Shortly before noon, a negro maid, Leila May Gordon, of 35 Mangum street, came in to wash clothes. She, too, revealed that Ray's favorite prank was hiding and then leaping into view.

Leila also noted his absence, and remarked about it to Mrs. Coleman. A short time later, Mrs. Coleman left and Leila went about her work, which occupied the afternoon.

The boy's parents returned home at about 5:30 o'clock. The father observed 25 cents lying on the mantel, money which he had given his son to make a purchase at a grocery.

"I guess Ray must have forgotten to go to the store," he said to his wife. Then the maid told them she had not seen Ray all day.

Love immediately made a search of the neighborhood. "Have you seen Ray?" he asked friends and relatives.

No one had seen the boy. The frantic father returned to the house. He went into the boy's room, peering into closets and other possible hiding places.

"I don't know what made me go to the cedar chest," he said later. "But I did. I pushed the button, and the lock snapped open. I lifted the lid, and there was my boy. His knife was right by him."

A doctor in the vicinity was called. He pronounced the boy dead, and said he "couldn't" have lived in the chest more than 15 minutes. A rescue squad from fire headquarters hurried to the Love home, but it was hopeless to attempt to revive the boy.

Ray, a freshman at Murphy Junior High school, was a popular member of Troop 30, of the Martha Brown Memorial Methodist church. He was a second-class Scout, and active in troop activities.

The cedar chest was purchased last Saturday. The grief-stricken mother was placed under care of a physician. The Loves have more than 150 pictures of their only son.

The body was taken to the establishment of Brandon-Bond-Condor.

Councilmen Eat Chicken Fried Old - Fashioned Style

"Vissected chicken" is what they are eating—or, in other words, it's chicken fried in the old-fashioned, cut-up-in-small-pieces southern style. Left to right are B. H. Bellinger, who presented city council with a fried chicken dinner at the Hartsfield; Councilman C. M. (Mac) Bolen, who introduced a resolution calling for a return to the true southern method of cutting up chicken, and Councilman J. Allen Couch, who is better at eating cut-up fried chicken than he is at talking about it. The scene is in council chamber at city hall.

Five Carroll Convicts Are Held In Cobb for Peek Deaths Inquiry

Mattie Lou Coursey, had been married only three months when they left Atlanta on Monday, June 20, headed for Marietta. Their bodies and the auto were found in the railroad cut the next morning.

The Peeks were in Carrollton Monday afternoon. They are believed to have been slain around midnight or a little afterwards. The bodies were identified at a Marietta funeral home by Peek's 18-year-old daughter, Helen Peek.

At the inquest the girl said that she had visited her father and stepmother at their home in Atlanta over the week end and that they had returned to Marietta with her Monday. Her father, she said, had planned to go to Carrollton, where he was to try to collect a $300 bill owed him for road scrapers that he had sold to Carroll County.

Her father, the girl said, sold equipment of all types to county governments, his work carrying him over the northern part of the state. Mrs. Peek, her stepmother, the girl said, traveled with her father, relieving him at the wheel of the automobile when he tired.

Hamp Chappell, commissioner of Carroll county, verified that Peek and his wife had been in Carrollton Monday afternoon, but said that the $300 owed by the county was discussed only casually.

"In my estimation, Peek seemed to be tight when he was in my office," Chappell told police.

Since that time, Fulton county authorities and State Highway Patrol officials have co-operated with Cobb county officers in attempts to solve the murders.

Efforts were made to trace bits of rope found about Mrs. Peek's neck and a systematic check of all textile companies was made. Again, investigators questioned various acquaintances of the couple in an effort to throw some light on the murders.

A Cobb county coroner's jury recessed after questioning relatives and acquaintances of the dead couple. Cobb County Coroner John Williams said he believed the crime was "straight out murder."

Hugh Arthur Brewster, who lives 400 yards from the railroad cut where the couple were found murdered, reported hearing unusual movements of two automobiles near his home on the morning of the murders. He said an auto with blinking headlights attracted his attention and that a few moments later he heard a loud crash.

Investigators believe the victims were intended to be burned, as kerosene had been poured on each body and in the wrecked automobile.

JAPANESE FLIERS MAKE DARING COUP
Land at China's Main Air Base, Rout Guards and Destroy 19 Aircraft.

SHANGHAI, July 19.—(Tuesday.)—(AP)—The Japanese navy in a colorfully worded communique announced its air army scored two daring victories yesterday over the Chinese.

In the first of two reported victories, the Japanese navy said a squadron of bombing planes landed on China's main air base at Nanchang. In the face of Chinese rifle fire and machine gun fire, the crews got out with torches and set fire to seven Chinese planes and then drove the defenders into retreat.

In the other, according to the communique, a second Japanese squadron engaged 15 Chinese air fighters in the air and shot down eight.

The invading airman's ground attack was proclaimed "the most daring attack in the history of the world's military aviation." The bombers' crews were reported to have wrested two machine guns from the Chinese and chased the defenders into a rice field.

Then they clambered back into their planes and "returned to their base unscathed," the communique said.

The squadron which shot down the Chinese planes, said the Japanese statement, also bombed 12 Chinese planes on the ground, "destroying all."

The communique said the only disturbing element of the day's victories was that the leader of the squadron which fought aloft was lost while his fellow airman made an "unprecedented" safe landing.

The leader, it reported, was killed when he was slain by a Chinese plane which he had shot down himself, his plane crashing to earth after the collision.

Unable to Shoot Straight.
Narrating further details of the reported Nanchang ground raid, the communique said the Chinese troops guarding the field were "so taken aback when the Japanese fliers landed that they were unable to shoot straight, permitting the Japanese to carry out their work unharmed."

The Chinese, on the other hand, said that their own fliers had made four raids yesterday in which they damaged eight Japanese ships.

Chinese reports said the Japanese were planning an immediate big push up the Yangtze river in the hope of blasting their way west of Hukow, gateway to Lake Poyang and territory south and southeast of Hankow, Chinese capital and ultimate Japanese objective.

CHICKEN IN PIECES ASKED BY COUNCIL

Resolution for Men To Go Coatless in Hot Weather Also Passed.

By FRANK DRAKE.

Everything was chicken yesterday at city council's meeting. But, the chicken was fried in small, easy-to-handle pieces and not one unwieldy lump.

In the first place, council went on record as opposing bisected fried chicken and called for a return to the old-fashioned method of frying the fowl in small cuts.

And in the second place, Councilman C. M. (Mac) Bolen, who introduced a resolution denouncing half chickens fried all in one piece, received an offer to appear on the national radio program, "We, the People," to tell the world about his and Mayor Hartsfield's pet peeve.

Chicken Dinner.
And thirdly, councilmen and aldermen cut the meeting short to eat a fried chicken dinner donated in the interest of the cause by B. H. Bellinger, of Atlanta. Of course, the chicken was unjointed before it was fried.

The state and federal governments were urged to join in the fried chicken issue in Councilman Bolen's resolution.

Bolen pointed out that the old southern custom of "vissecting" chickens to be fried is giving away to the practice of just bisecting the fowl and frying each half in one piece.

This, he said, spoils the succulence of the meat and makes it very inconvenient for the eater to handle.

"Southerners believe a bird in the hand is worth two on a fork," read his resolution.

Want Chicken Meat.
Council voted also to ask that chicken meat be substituted for tuna fish in chicken salad, and that "some chicken be used in making chicken soup."

After passing this momentous legislation, the aldermen and councilmen set out to illustrate just what they meant when they said small pieces of fried chicken are easier to handle than half a chicken fried in a lump.

Bellinger passed around the dinners, prepared for standing-up eating, and the city officials, including the mayor, pitched in.

They grabbed drum sticks and cleaned them to the bone. Wings, breasts, pulley bones and thighs, went the same way, piece by piece.

"See What I Mean."
"You see what I mean, don't you," asked Bolen, of nobody in particular. "If this was a whole half a chicken you'd be struggling with it until sundown."

Smacking their lips, the council members agreed that small pieces are better.

"The same principle of not putting all your eggs in one basket," said one. "If you drop one piece of this, you've still got some more."

The chicken issue will probably be on the in September, Bolen said. Robert M. Reuschle, director of the Columbia network program, wrote him that his and the mayor's campaign to "cut up fried chicken in small pieces" is a subject of national interest.

"Do you believe also that clams could be used in making clam chowder?" Reuschle asked Bolen.

No Divided Attention.
"I refuse to have my attention divided," the councilman said. "This campaign is taking up all my spare time, now."

He and the mayor have received letters from persons in nearly every state, and scores of newspapers have had editorials commending the "common sense" of cutting up fried chicken.

However, Bolen yesterday did join with Councilman John A. White in passing a resolution officially sanctioning men leaving off their hot coats in the summer time.

White, pointing out that while Atlanta's weather is not as hot as it is in many other cities, called

MANGHAM ASSAILS STATE LIQUOR PLAN

Says Program of Distribution Is 'Unsatisfactory in All Phases.'

REYNOLDS, Ga., July 18.—(AP) John J. Mangham, candidate for Governor, today denounced Georgia's current liquor distribution plan as "unsatisfactory in all phases" and urged the adoption of the Washington state control plan.

"Under the Rivers plan," he said, "the state does not control the sale of liquor, but such control is turned over to the private dealers, many of whom are bootleggers who formerly defied the law. There is no assurance that public liquor is being sold and all profit from its sale goes to the dealers."

"After Mr. Rivers has paid for his liquor warehouses and has paid his army of inspectors and henchmen who supervise the distribution of liquor the state will be lucky to get half a million dollars a year revenue for its schools."

"If I am elected Governor, I shall work to have the Washington plan adopted under which the state revenue will be vastly increased which will enable the state to cut its gasoline taxes at least two cents and to aid counties which have lost money through the homestead exemption laws."

Mangham also pledged himself to veto all major tax measure until his administration has promised especially that he would use his influence to prevent the enactment of any kind of a sales tax.

The candidate made other appearances today at Butler and Perry.

ATLANTA, GA., JULY 19, 1938.

THE RATE FIGHT AT BUFFALO

The peaceful fight at Buffalo over the proposed revision of freight rates is so closely interwoven with the future welfare of the country, it could easily rank, as to importance, with many of the nation's engagements on the field of battle. The fight, which was instigated by the south, was started for the purpose of removing unfair differentials assessed against southern products moving to northern markets in competition with similar products manufactured in northern territory. Because of these differentials, northern products also move to southern markets at lower transportation costs to compete with southern products.

The south rightfully contends these differentials are discriminatory, made without regard to length of haul and constitute what actually amounts to a protective tariff against southern industry. In rebuttal, the north attempts to justify the differentials on the grounds they are based on geographical proximity of northern producers to northern markets; that discrimination would result against them if the differentials were ordered removed by the Interstate Commerce Commission. These same northern spokesmen are discreetly silent on the subject of the resultant lower rates on southbound traffic to tap southern markets to which southern producers have closer geographical proximity.

In principle, the differentials are apparently unconstitutional. The constitution of the United States clearly forbids the imposition of duties on commerce moving from one state to another. Section 9, Article 1, reads in part: "No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any state." And again: "No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce to the ports of one state over those of another." Yet, to all intents and purposes, a discriminatory freight rate on a southern manufactured product moving into a northern state has the exact effect of a duty or tax directly laid on an article exported from one state to another. It is a preference given, in violation of the constitution, by a regulation of commerce to the ports of one state over the ports of another. The principle applies with equal force to interior ports as to river and seaports.

It can scarcely be doubted that the Interstate Commerce Commission will remove the discriminations. It would be the equitable and just thing to do. Once removed, the south will turn its attention to another angle of the same problem. For there are those who argue, with seeming logic, that industrial expansion and diversified farming should not be carried on for the sole purpose of invading foreign markets; that the actual need is for more equitable freight rates and more factories in the south to meet southern demands. Southern manufacturers and farmers have been too long deprived of their own markets—markets right around them—by competitors a thousand miles away. Removal of the discriminatory differentials is the first step in the right direction.

The variety and volume of manufactured, as well as agricultural, products which are imported into the south, into Georgia, taking business from southern industry and farms, is literally appalling. But the potential market is so tremendous in the country, as a whole, no section need suffer for the want of an outlet. The maximum consuming power of the nation has never been approached.

DEMOCRACY LOOKS SOUTH

To greater degree than in more than 100 years the nations of Central and South America today regard the United States as a friend to which they may turn in their time of need without hesitation and without fear of "Yankee" domination. The significance of this changed attitude can be measured only when projected against the picture of the rest of the world; against nations armed to the proverbial hilt and against brothers spilling the blood of brothers.

This friendship is a concrete evidence of the tremendous value of the Roosevelt "good neighbor" policy and of the measured, intelligent application of the principles he has promulgated, by Secretary of State Cordell Hull. In an administration in which domestic issues largely have overshadowed the positive foreign policies, too little attention has been paid by the public to the development of friendly relations with the republics to the south.

Other elements have fostered this friendship, it is true, but in greatest measure the Roosevelt principles, changing in effect, a doctrine promulgated in 1893, have brought this easing of relations which augurs well for the future of the western hemisphere. It found its latest flower in the arbitration of the Chaco dispute of Bolivia and Paraguay, in which the work of the American delegate, Spruille Braden, ambassador of this country in Argentina, was largely responsible.

The goodwill engendered at the Pan-American conference in Buenos Aires and at the arbitration conference sessions has extended over most of the Americas and indicates early settlement of some long-standing disputes between South American nations. Among these are the 107-year-old quarrel between Peru and Ecuador, which flared in June when a Peruvian river gunboat opened fire (so the Ecuadorians say), on a group of Ecuadorian soldiers who had trespassed upon Peruvian territory (or so the Peruvians say). Some minor differences between Central American states will be referred to the eighth Pan-American conference, meeting in Lima, Peru, late this year.

Until recently the nations of South America have leaned heavily on racial, commercial and political ties with the European nations. The trend now is to break with these factors and to deepen friendship for this country. This was strikingly underlined last Wednesday by the break of commercial relations between Brazil and Germany.

Germany has been rapidly losing ground because the Nazi regime has adopted an attitude which is outmoded and resented. Propaganda has been proving troublesome to none-too-stable regimes, while apparent German intentions to create "minority" problems in the southern continent also has been responsible, in part, for this loss. Added to this has been the troublesome question of the "aski," or blocked mark, with which Germany has been paying for her purchases. These purchases in turn have been dumped on world markets to secure foreign exchange or gold for the insatiable appetite of the armaments race. This has disrupted prices to such an extent that several nations, notably Brazil and Ecuador, have found themselves undersold with their own products. In addition, the Nazis have tried to use purchases of South American products as a means of introducing political pressure.

Then, too, there has been the steady drift away from the League of Nations on the part of Latin American countries, at one time numbered among its most enthusiastic supporters. Nine have resigned, the latest being Venezuela, which announced withdrawal July 12. The other eight are Brazil, Chile, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and Paraguay. Sympathies of these nations steadily declined as the League fumbled one international problem after another. The Ethiopian fiasco, for instance, was the direct cause of Chile's resignation. League fees, which proved burdensome without return, also have been a potent factor.

Meanwhile, the United States has become the "great democracy of the north," and its influence in the councils of the nations has increased in stature. Many profess to see in hemisphere co-operation the means for greater prosperity for all and for greater safety for all. This is not to say that all problems have been solved. The path has merely been blazed, with the spade work yet to be accomplished. In some of these countries the lower classes have been denied both education and opportunity. Today this condition is being remedied to some degree. In education lies the hope and the future of democracy, which cannot exist without an enlightened people.

It is not enough to view this growing friendship and to drift. It is within the power of the United States, through co-operation, to bring to these peoples the benefits which have contributed to the development of this country, and in so doing create vast markets for the output of American factories. Untapped riches lie on the continent—riches in raw materials and in human materials. To the east, and to the west lie nothing but rapidly developing chaos; to the south lies the basis for a new civilization founded on democracy.

Already, 1938 shapes up as a typical year. The deficit will be enormous. Babs Hutton is unhappy, and Omsk has had its annual mention in all the papers.

A Swiss city is rearing a monument to one of its sons, a lensmaker—and we can read the inscription from here, "Focal Boy Makes Good."

While a bit short on deeds, the Evian conference have hearts in the right places. They solemnly resolve that being a refugee from a dictator country is tough.

Just another decade or two of that final victory in Spain and Franco will be a career man.

Folk dancing in gas masks is something new on English village greens. It is national defense all right; but is it art?

THE BUY-AND-GIVE PLAN OF RELIEF

(From The Philadelphia Inquirer.)

Some business organizations are represented as looking with misgivings upon the government's plan to acquire, through the WPA, surplus stocks of men's clothing and to distribute them directly to the needy. While this system may simplify relief methods, it would appear that the apprehension of businessmen concerning it is not without cause.

The first tenders sent out for men's clothing asked for bids based on delivery at factories or storage points, cutting out entirely retailers and handlers. If this plan were used widely it is conceivable that many persons, engaged in the handling of garments after they leave the factories, would be thrown out of work. Moreover, the chief purpose of the government's new spending campaign is to provide purchasing power so that there will be a larger market for manufactured goods. The buy-and-give program has to do with government purchase of excess production which might glut the market. But if producers know that a government will supply with funds is ready at all times to buy up surpluses, is there not a possibility of chronic overproduction which might weaken the aims of the spending drive?

Relief is an important feature of the spending-lending campaign, but it should be provided intelligently. If there is any likelihood that the government's buy-and-give plan will tend to create new unemployment and raise difficult problems for business it should be studied with great care before being given broad application.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

(Editor's Note: Dr. C. H. Foreman, referred to in the following article, has recently been appointed acting state director of the National Emergency Council for Georgia, succeeding Erie Cocks.)

SOUTH HOLDS ANSWER

WASHINGTON, July 18.—In the fast-approaching struggle for control of the Democratic party, the great unknown factor is the south. No one doubts that, while the Garners and Farleys can rely on the Hagues of Jersey City and Kellys, of Chicago, the rank and file of northern voters will follow the President. Many believe, however, that, in the south, the rank and file are on the Garner-Farley side. Recently, ex-President Herbert Hoover has been talking privately of coalition movements, and all highly placed Republican politicians love the story of the southern colonel, who told a friend:

"If you damn Yankees don't stop voting Democratic, you're going to ruin the Democratic party."

For those who regard Walter George, of Georgia; Cotton Ed Smith, of South Carolina, and Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, as the real representatives of the south, it would be well to remember that a new type of southern leader is slowly gaining prominence. As yet, most of these new men are concealed in the chambers of the New Deal, but, when the time comes, they will be ready to come into the open.

These new men may be seen at work in the story behind the President's recent request for a report on economic conditions in the south. Officially, the report is to be prepared by the National Emergency Council and to be used as a sort of touchstone for policies concerning the south. The report is almost finished and will be used as a major weapon in the President's effort to capture the southern democracy from its present conservative owners.

COMMITTEE OF THE EARNEST

Two years ago, a group of southern New Dealers in congress and the executive branch formed a southern policy committee. It was one of a number of similar governmental discussion groups and, like most of the others, it foregathered informally each week in a Washington restaurant.

Justice Black, the Alabama congressman who succeeded Justice Hugo L. Black in the senate, was one of the prime movers. Another was C. H. Foreman, Ph. D., at Columbia, and Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes' chief adviser both on power and the negro problem.

Justice Black himself took and still takes a leading part, and among the others who have attended the meetings are Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida; Farm Security Administrator Will W. Alexander; Representatives Maury Maverick, of Texas; Joe Starnes, of Alabama, and London B. Johnson, of Texas; and Justice Black's brother-in-law, the RFC assistant general counsel, Clifford J. Durr. Altogether the committee has about 40 members.

At their meetings, these men regularly discussed southern problems from the New Deal point of view. At length, this spring, the idea of an official report on the south was born.

THE BITTER BATTLE Foreman took the idea to the White House. Justice Black backed him up. The President fell in with the scheme at once, directed the National Emergency Council to take responsibility for a study, and issued his public command, naming the "nation's number one economic problem."

The substance of the final report has already been prepared with the aid of southern policy committee members. While it is unlikely to contain recommendations, it will describe southern problems in such terms as to make the need for action plainly apparent. It will, in fact, drive just a few miles into the country where concrete roads are unknown and sample the type of auto travel we had to contend with "most everywhere, just a decade or two ago."

The battle between the President and the leaders of the southern Democratic organization is now being publicly fought in Georgia, where the President hopes to prevent Senator George's renomination. It began long ago, however, when such men as Black and Maverick, representing the ideas of the New Deal, made their first assault on the entrenched conservatism of the southern Democratic leadership.

None can predict the battle's outcome, but whoever gains the victory, it is safe to say that the battle will do much to change the face of southern politics.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

Hope, like a star,
Through trouble gleams;
Faith, dim, afar,
Sends healing beams;
Things as they are
Fade, so it seems,
When Love lifts the bar
To heaven of dreams.

Red Clay
In The Rain.

It is not necessary to say "I remember when," if you are talking about dangerous roads in Georgia. Those of you who never leave the paved highways which nowadays criss-cross the state, can if you will, drive just a few miles into the country where concrete roads are unknown and sample the type of auto travel we had to contend with "most everywhere, just a decade or two ago."

Sunday night had to go some 20 miles off the paving, into the neighborhood of Sautee, in north Georgia.

And, halfway along our dirt-road course, a cloudburst descended. Crept through the rain safely then, without warning, hit a section of road covered only with that red clay from the fields, which becomes more slippery than polished glass when it rains.

Slid gently along, with a 20-foot ditch at the side of the road, for a couple of hundred feet or so. Then met an upgrade and it was hopeless to try and proceed. I lurched to a halt in the car, of course, although it is supposed to be a mandatory rule to have one there at all times.

Down The Old
Clay Road.

Didn't dare, in the dark, attempt anything at all, for, every time we tried to move the car an inch it slid eight inches nearer that ditch. And couldn't see to the rear. It was a cloudy, pitch-dark night.

So, two of us walked, in the dark, for half a mile or more to the camp at Skylake, Jack Brooks, the director, and one of his cheerful henchmen, returned with us, with chains and flashlights. Then managed to slide ever so slowly, backwards, away from the danger place, turn around and go back from whence we had come.

It is a nasty sensation, on such a road, when the gentlest of propellant touches to your car sends it sliding crabwise toward a deep drop.

A Day With Campers.

We had spent Sunday with the boys at the Athens "Y" camp and the girls at Camp Chattooga. Had a perfect day—with more of Louise Morton's inspired food for lunch—and hours of pleasant idleness while youth disported vigorously all around.

They held a water meet at Chattooga in the afternoon. The most impressive item, to my mind, was that part of the program devoted to the life savers.

To see eight or ten strong, lithe limbed young girls in their teens, diving into deep water, swimming with little more effort than fishes and hauling out others who simulate the perfect helplessness of the drowning. They rescued these by all manner of "holds," and laughed all through. Demonstrated convincingly that any one of them could bring four or five or six safely from the water with scarce-

One Word More

By RALPH MCGILL.

He Who Votes It always has been my idea that Governor E. D. Rivers had quite a lot of political perspicacity. It is a very fine quality to have if one is in politics, this perspicacity. Those who have it get elected to office.

May Read I am convinced he has brought to the Georgia political scene an innovation which is going to make a bit of political history.

The Book I refer to his "book." It is a huge book, standing about six feet high and its writing may be read at a distance of 75 or 100 yards. In it is written his record.

The record is something which the average office-seeker speaks of with some strength. Hardly a man offering for reelection but first announces he stands on his record. The average voter has but a vague idea about any record. He usually knows, if the candidate is a senator or congressman, how he stood on the soldiers' bonus and social security and seed loans. If he is governor the voter knows what the governor said about taxes and whether or not they are any lower.

Ed Rivers brought along his record. He stood it on the platform beside him before he spoke. It was a thing of mystery, closed and with a sentinel standing beside it to turn its pages at the proper time. It excited curiosity.

He put down an excellent groundwork for the opening of the issue. That was whether or not he had carried out the platform on which he was elected.

Then the book swung open and there was the first page of the record. The voters of Georgia are going to like that book. It is something substantial. It tickles the fancy. It intrigues. It is the record itself down in large letters.

It Ticked It tickled the crowd, did that book.

The Book They followed each page.

The Governor went right down the line. He had co-operated with the President; he had given them homestead exemptions on homes and furniture, he had given them free schoolbooks, a guaranteed seven months' school term, old-age pensions, an expanded and adequate health program and roads.

That was all in the book. All of it had been done under his administration. He did say that in a former administration a few free books had been given away—"just enough to make people mad." Then he told how much the books cost per year—$14 for the first year and so on.

One farmer somewhere in the crowd shouted:

"I got nine kids, Governor. I know."

Rivers has given the state seven months of rural schooling. The teachers have been paid. It is a fact this hasn't happened since the state had a real system of public schools.

Of almost equal interest was the fact that more than 1,000 adults had learned to read and write. Georgia will make no real progress until the state is a literate state. No one can quarrel with Rivers on his school program which is the first good program the state has had.

Equally true is the fact his administration is spending about twice as much on health as any other administration has spent. He has that in the book and he had it, too, the reductions in contagious diseases.

Georgia, so statistics show, stands at the bottom of the list in the number of homeowners. The Governor said, when the page was turned to his record on homestead exemptions, that this law had reduced taxes and would encourage the owning of homes. There isn't a doubt of that.

His opponents may charge excessive cost and any number of things, but that book is going to be difficult to surmount. He has too, he had that quit. The quit was made by an old woman who had received a pension. She brought it in, with a prayer in every stitch.

One ought to be able to win an election with such a quit. But that book—its something new in Georgia politics. It's the finest single political feature offered since the days when Henry Grady was managing John B. Gordon's campaign.

With the sound book and the quit of sentiment, it will be difficult for the boys to handle the great little orator from south Georgia.

To Further A number of people present in the really great crowd which Rivers had, were there to hear and to put an ear to the ground.

The Experts They heard much applause on numerous occasions during the speech. But the most applause was for the name of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It came when Governor Rivers turned the first page in the book and said:

"I promised you I would co-operate with President Roosevelt and I have. I promise you I will continue to co-operate with him and obtain for Georgia her just share of the federal funds."

There was other applause. But at no time as much as for this mention of co-operation with the President.

All of which confuses still farther those who are trying to determine what weight the President has in Georgia politics.

A Race Has Decayed When Its Members Will Lick Boots to Get Money

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Picture a minor tragedy in the social life of a lady, no longer young, whose husband is prosperous and very busy. She is giving a party and finds herself short of men. In desperation she hires a young man to fill in.

This youngster is well-bred but poor. He is doing odd jobs to pay expenses while doing post-graduate work at a university. He is no less intelligent and much better educated than the lady who employs him. He dresses and behaves like a gentleman.

What, then, is wrong with the arrangement? The lady needs an attractive man to eat at her table and dance with her guests. She employs him as casually and impersonally as she would employ a decorator or plumber or errand boy. Isn't that all right?

The young man needs money. For sufficient pay he would serve the lady as decorator, plumber or errand boy. Serving as her guest is merely a job, and he must have jobs to pay expenses. Then what is wrong about it?

The wrong results from the vagaries of the human heart and the inherent snobbishness that is in us all.

The lady, being privileged to spend her husband's money, feels important. She regards her hired guest as an inferior. If he would be offended. However gracious she may be, she looks down on him. And that, of course, is her right in a free country.

But the young man knows how she feels. However cynical he may be, he knows in his heart that he is earning a dollar by playing the role of inferior. He is prostituting his self-respect. It is merchandising of the basest kind—swallowing his pride like a flat-terer courtier of a great profit.

It is typical of a new baseness in our national character. When life was less complicated and luxuries were fewer and money seemed less important, ordinary men valued self-respect, independence and personal dignity above all else. If they had little else, they at least kept their pride.

Now nothing seems contemptible if there's money in it. One who doesn't need charity will use the ballot to get it. Men in high office use their advantage to get money from "side lines." Yes-men swallow insults and pat the back of the boss. High and low stoop to "good business"; but when self-respect goes, character and manhood go with it.

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"Next moment, from bastion to bastion all 'round
Of the siege-circled mountains, there tumbled the sound
Of the battering thunder's indefinite peal—
And Lord Alfred had sprung to the feet of Lucille."

We live and learn. Summer after summer, in vacation time, we have posted letters on the train at the East Flat Rock, N. C., station without knowing until we read the current issue of Globe with its description of the area between Highlands and Tryon, that the station is the highest east of the Rockies (altitude 2,780 feet). At Tryon, Globe's traveler grows downright garrulous. He speaks of the "thermal belt" surrounding it, "where dew, fogs and frost are seldom visitors," a "year-round resort section," along whose roads are hillside vineyards producing the "wine of Tryon" with a "flavor not equaled elsewhere outside of Italy." He speaks of the toymakers, woodcarvers and weavers, of "Perry Coggins, the town dentist, manager of the best voice and instrument ocette of dyed-in-the-wool mountain music that man has ever heard," and of "Frank Bridgeman singing falsetto to with an artistry unequalled even by cowboys."

In the same story we learn that Highlands, N. C., "has the highest altitude of any incorporated town in the east." And that the Blue Ridge parkway "will be one of the most gigantic and spectacular feats of highway construction that the world has ever seen. It is planned to straddle the ridge with a four-lane pavement all the way from Shenandoah park, in Virginia, to the Great Smokies and beyond . . . commercial traffic will be excluded. . . . Meanwhile, from our friend, Hugh McKee, in a 4,000-foot-high Linville, N. C., comes word that "the Blue Ridge parkway is now being constructed along the rim of Linville."

Owen Meredith's Lord Alfred and Lucille, if they lived and loved today, would have preferred North Carolina's mountains to Italy's, we have no doubt.

"I would greatly appreciate the use of your column," writes a gay Virginian, "to suggest to my many admirers among the opposite sex that if I don't give them my usual cheery smile, it is not due to any dyspepsia or snobbishness, but to the impossibility of recognizing them through their dark glasses."

For reference here to the old charge that the American Civil Liberties Union is more devoted to those of the radical than to those of the conservative, this column is romped on gently but firmly by Donald Adamson, of Washington, D. C. "It is the charge that those people who are against civil liberties for selfish and concrete personal reasons or through knowing intolerance seem to have been most successful in 'selling' to people like yourself, men of goodwill, really interested in protecting civil liberty," he writes. "A count of the cases undertaken by the Civil Liberties Union would undoubtedly show more radicals championed than conservatives, but that is largely because the civil liberties of conservatives are not so often denied." Our correspondent forgets that the comment here to which he refers was one in praise of the union for championing the civil liberties of some conservatives.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON

FOR THE COOKS.

Those days when we are having so many good things to eat—plenty of vegetables and fruits and dairy products and poultry—when the tables are filled with bounteous dishes of corn and beans and peas and beets and okra and salads and chicken and fish and pies and cake—these are days when we ought to remember especially to give the cooks a hand. It is mighty easy to come in from work or in from play or to get up from a night's rest and rush into the dining room and just take for granted that our meals will be ready.

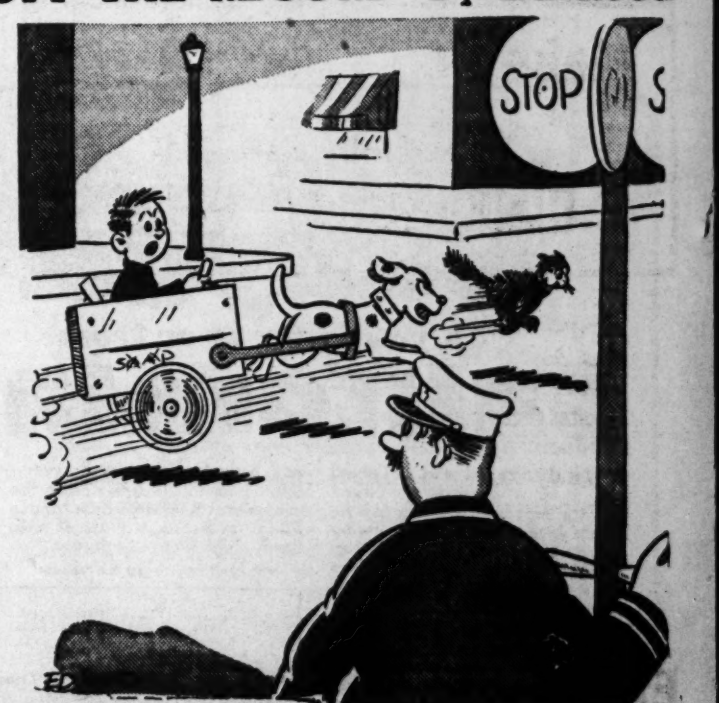

If you think it is hot where you have to work—in an office, in a store, in a shop, in a mill, in the field—think about how hot it is in a kitchen with a blazing stove carrying enough heat to cook those dishes to suit your taste. O yes, I know I will receive several letters telling me that it is not necessary any more to have hot kitchens. Well, come on with your letters. I promise to throw them all away, and as they tumble into the waste basket I will rise to give another cheer for every form of progress which has contributed to the happiness of cooks, but at the same time an even stronger cheer for that vast army of people in every community who daily—three times daily—prepare the food we eat.

Here, for example, is the wife of a share cropper. They both have to work in the field. The husband gets up before daylight and builds a fire in the stove and the wife cooks breakfast for themselves and their children and they are both in the field by sunup. She has to come in from the fields, in many instances, after a morning's work, and cook their dinner, and then, while many are taking their afternoon naps, that wife goes back to the house to cook supper. God bless them! Give them a hand, a hearty hand.

SERVICE LEAGUE GRATEFUL FOR AID

Editor Constitution: The Atlanta unit, Women's Overseas Service League, is deeply grateful for the generous publicity you gave us during the eighteenth annual convention of our organization which was held July 3-6 at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

The excellent news articles and interesting pictures were greatly enjoyed by our guests from Maine to California as well as by the many friends of the hostess unit. There was a great demand for your papers each morning.

If you could read the letters now being received from league members and distinguished guests you would feel repaid for all you did for us. They are full of praise for the co-operation of the Atlanta newspapers. Atlanta showed her guests that true traditional southern hospitality from the moment of arrival to the last goodbye. A past national president praises the efforts and real kindness of the reporters, especially Mr. Fuhrman and Mr. Roton.

On behalf of the Women's Overseas Service League and members of the Atlanta unit, I extend sincere thanks to you and your entire staff for the service you rendered.

LIKED EDITORIAL ON ARABI LYNCHING

Editor Constitution: On Thursday, July 14, at the zone meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society held in the fair state, representative Christian women from ten churches commended your splendid editorial in Thursday morning's Constitution regarding the lynching at Arabi, Ga.

We voted to send you this letter voicing our approval of the fearless stand you have taken against lynching in our fair state. MRS. GEORGE SCOFIELD,
MRS. Leader, Decatur Zone,
Decatur, Ga.

AN OUTBURST OF BRUTALITY

Editor Constitution: Please let me express my personal gratification at your editorial with regard to the recent lynching at Arabi. It is essential that there should be created a public opinion which will make such acts impossible in our beloved state. A lynching does not represent the sentiment of the community and is usually promoted not by a sense of justice but by an outburst of brutality. An editorial such as yours renders a real service in the creation of the right sort of public opinion on the matter of lynching.

RYLAND KNIGHT, Pastor,
Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist Church,
Atlanta, Ga.

ASHAMED OF HIS BIRTHRIGHT

Editor Constitution: I read your very appealing editorial in regards to the lynching which occurred at Arabi, Ga. I am a salesman and a typical Georgia Cracker. When such dastardly crimes occur within the borders of this state it makes me want to relinquish my birthright as a Georgian. I am longing for the day to come when our state will be free from all the stigma of the reconstruction era and we will settle down to a spirit of true progress. In my travels during the past week I have been the subject of ridicule and have even lost a few of my best customers in some of the municipalities in which I operate in states across the Mason-Dixon line.

JOHN R. WILLINGHAM,
Augusta, Ga.

A DASTARDLY CRIME

Editor Constitution: I have just read with very deep appreciation the fine editorial in this morning's Constitution on "The Shame of Arabi."

I do not often write editors commenting upon the work which they do since I know they know more about their work than I. I do want you to know, however, that as one loyal Georgian I appreciate deeply your strong statement regarding this dastardly crime committed in south Georgia last week. May I express the hope that your editorial will be copied widely in the press of the nation.

Sincerely yours,
E. C. PETERS,
Augusta, Ga.

A FIRM STAND NEEDED

Editor Constitution: Your editorial "The Shame of Arabi" was splendid. Again, your paper takes a step forward to put Georgia closer over to the list of progressive states.

I like your first and last paragraphs. "There is a list of American towns and cities—by no means confined to the south—which bear against their names black blots of shame. They are the places which have been the scenes of lynchings, that crime of mob passions run riot. It is a crime greater against America herself and all her laws, against the state and against the people, than against the wretched victim of depraved cruelty."

"The pleasant, quiet little town of Arabi, Ga., has held all America up to the world, once more, as a nation liable at any time, to all the brutality of mob rule, without respect for law. It matters not how guilty the lynchers' victim was—his guilt does not mitigate, in one iota, from their greater crime."

I am glad to see your paper take the firm stand—officially—against mob rule, lynch law, etc.

HARDY SCOTT,
Atlanta, Ga.

CREATING FINE ATTITUDES OF LIFE

Editor Constitution: I have just read your fine editorial on the Arabi lynching and want to express to you my appreciation of the strong article. Support like this from such a daily as The Constitution will do more to make a finer state than anything I know of, and such we want Georgia to be.

May I also add my delight in the selection of Mr. McGill and Mr. Jones as executive and associate editors. The implications of their articles are most valuable in changing and creating fine attitudes of life.

MRS. L. O. TURNER, Gen. Sec.,
Ga. Women's Christian Missionary Society,

FOREST FIRES LAID TO INCENDIARISM

8 Blazes Deliberately Started, Supervisor Believes.

SEATTLE, July 18.—(AP)—The trails of incendiary fires were sought tonight in forests of western Washington, center of the Pacific Northwest fire siege that has blackened thousands of acres of timber land.

Forest Supervisor T. S. Good-year said incendiary "unquestionably" figured in the 25,000-acre Ryderwood-Mount Abernethy fire in southwest Washington.

"We believe eight fires were deliberately set in Thurston county last week," Goodyear said. "Investigators also picked up piles of oily rags placed in forest areas in King county."

GEORGIANS INJURED, ONE KILLED IN CRASH

ATHENS, Tenn., July 18.—(AP)—One man was killed and four others, all Georgians, were injured near here today in an automobile-truck collision on the Lee highway.

Jack Kiles, 25, of Roanoke, Ala., was killed. The injured were O. G. McCain, driver of the automobile; Frank McClellan, L. B. Wright and W. H. Brown, all of LaGrange, Ga.

The five men were en route to Detroit when their car crashed with the truck, driven by a negro. The truck driver was held on charges of manslaughter and reckless driving.

DR. MORGAN TELLS OF EARLY DISPUTES AMONG TVA HEADS

Ousted Chairman Declares He Never Made Attempt To 'Grab Power.'

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., July 18.—(AP)—Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, ousted as chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, charged today differences within the TVA appeared less than a month after the agency was created in 1933.

He testified before a congressional investigation committee that disagreement arose from the first over matters of policy, declaring TVA Directors Harcourt A. Morgan and David E. Lilienthal opposed many of his suggestions. Harcourt A. Morgan, now chairman, testified President Roosevelt was guided by the "hand of Providence" when he selected the Tennessee valley for the federal government's experiment in social and economic planning.

Chairman Morgan outlined the TVA program which he said sought to cure a "cancerous growth which must affect adversely the entire national well-being." Not once did he refer to Dr. Morgan, whose defiance of President Roosevelt's authority led to his dismissal as chairman and precipitated the inquiry.

At Odds With Associates. Dr. Morgan said he felt immediate action was necessary in the TVA program, in line with President Roosevelt's emergency relief program, but that his associates held back in favor of a "long-range program."

The three of them were "far apart in philosophy," he said, adding that he had never made any attempt to "grab power" for himself in those early days.

He said it was he who suggested the appointment of a general manager and that he recommended Albert L. Scott, head of Lockwood Green engineering firm of New York. Scott declined the offer.

"That, I think, is a good indication I was not trying to grab power," he asserted.

Dr. Morgan denied he tried to plan the development of all power sites in the Tennessee valley as charged by Harcourt Morgan, and denied his policies were "alarmist, visionary and highly impractical" as his former associates had said.

Opposed Appointment. Dr. Morgan went on record as objecting to appointment of Thomas A. Panter, of Los Angeles, as the committee's chief engineer. A letter from him protested Panter's appointment on grounds Panter might be subject "to an influence" unfriendly to the former TVA chairman.

The letter said Panter's superior in the Los Angeles Bureau of Power and Light, Ezra Frederick Scattergood, had attacked Dr. Morgan's policies as TVA chairman-director.

At one of the early board meetings, Dr. Morgan said, Lilienthal and Harcourt Morgan suggested the TVA "had just two functions—fertilizer and power, and that the TVA had no business in any other activities."

FOUR ARE INDICTED IN DAUGHTRY CASE

Osborne Newton, Defendant in Original Proceedings, Among Those Named.

SYLVANIA, Ga., July 18.—(AP)—The Screven county grand jury this afternoon returned indictments against four men in connection with the swamp slaying of Charlie L. Daughtry, wealthy Rocky Ford planter.

Those indicted were Linnie Lanier, John Burns and Osborne Newton, white and Aaron Nelson, negro, all of whom are in jail. Newton was a defendant in the original case, which was nolle prossed last March.

After returning the indictments, the grand jury took up other criminal cases, but it was understood that its investigation of the Daughtry case might be resumed at the present session.

The grand jury did not close its investigation of the case, but will resume its deliberations later this month, it was said.

The case will be tried before Judge William Woodrum July 25.

RAILROAD FORCES UNABLE TO AGREE

Preliminary Conference Ends in Deadlock.

CHICAGO, July 18.—(AP)—Management and labor, deadlocked today after a three-hour preliminary conference, were scheduled to meet again tomorrow to consider the proposed 15 per cent wage cut for the nation's railroad workers.

No agreement was reached today by a joint conference committee of the Class I railroads and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

H. A. Enoch, committee chairman, said: "We presented an alternative to the 15 per cent cut proposal. We're talking 15 per cent."

A. F. Whitney, president of the brotherhood, said: "We're not offering a compromise plan. Nothing has occurred to suggest that wages should be reduced."

GUARDSMEN GO TO CAMP. WASHINGTON, Ga., July 18.—Battery B of the 264th battalion, coast artillery, Georgia national guards, has been ordered to two weeks of intensive training at Pensacola, Fla. The Wilkes county unit was organized by Captain Jack Stoddard and commanded by him until he became adjutant general of Georgia. Captain H. H. Johnson is in command at Pensacola.

Young Evangelist Is Likened to Billy Sunday

They call him another Billy Sunday, but the Rev. Jesse M. Hendley says "it's the power of God's Word that's saving souls right and left" at the tent meeting on the Moreland school grounds, near Little Five Points. During the two weeks the meeting has been running, 214 men, women and children have been converted. The revival will go another week, or maybe indefinitely, the young evangelist said last night.

Young Evangelist Converts Scores By Preaching Old-Time Religion

Throngs Jam Big Tent Each Night Here and Respond to Urgings of Leader Whose Meetings Remind Many of Billy Sunday's Revivals.

By LUKE GREENE.

Old-timers who remember the great meetings of Billy Sunday, the famous evangelist, think history is repeating itself out at the tent revival conducted by the Rev. Jesse M. Hendley on Moreland school grounds.

During the two weeks the revival has been running 214 men, women and children have been converted, and each night others seeking salvation march down the aisles and kneel before the altar to ask forgiveness for their sins.

Sunday night a crowd of more than 2,500 jammed the big tent and stood on the outside to hear the young evangelist preach the "old-time religion." And when he made his eloquent plea for sinners to come forward, 21 answered his call. Last night they continued to come.

Respond to Sermon. The meeting will go on this week at least, and maybe indefinitely "if God continues to bless." Evangelist Hendley declared, "It's the power of God's word that's saving souls right and left."

Last night he preached on "The Wise Man and the Fool in Scripture." At times his voice would rise to a high crescendo. Then it would fall to almost a whisper. And as he called on the penitents to "serve the Lord with fear and rejoice with trembling," the power of his sermon could be seen taking effect.

On the front seat a young woman bowed her head as if in prayer. Another put her handkerchief over her face. An elderly man leaned forward and put his head on the back of the seat in front of him.

Safety Chief Issues New Rules To Eliminate Reckless Driving

In an effort to eliminate reckless driving from the highways of the state, Commissioner of Public Safety Phil Brewster yesterday announced rules under which drivers' licenses will be revoked or suspended.

The rules become effective at once. No drivers will be permitted to operate cars without a license and if the license is revoked or suspended the driver faces a heavy penalty if he uses his car. The commissioner said licenses would be revoked for the following reasons:

1. Hit and run.
2. Driving under the influence of intoxicants.
3. Using a car to escape or in the commission of a felony.
4. Failure to report any accident in which the damage is $50 or more or in which a person is killed or injured.
5. Removing a car from the scene of any accident in the above category.

The commissioner also said that licenses would be suspended by the courts or the commissioner in their discretion for the following reasons:

1. Reckless driving, which is defined generally as driving without regard for the safety of others.
2. Failure to stop for a school bus, loading or unloading.
3. Passing through a school zone at more than 25 miles an hour.
4. Failure to dim lights when within 300 yards of approaching car.
5. Parking on highway.
6. Use or possession of siren without authorization.
7. Failure to stop when signalled by officer.
8. Driving with brakes that will not stop car within 120 feet when driving 40 miles per hour.

SALE OF HELIUM TO NAZIS FAVORED

Lakehurst Commandant Returns From Germany.

NEW YORK, July 18.—(AP)—Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, commandant of the Lakehurst naval air station, returned from Germany today and expressed the personal and unofficial view that the United States should sell helium to the Third Reich.

As an officer in the navy, Rosendahl said, it would be improper for him to criticize governmental policies, so his views must be construed as unofficial.

"The large airship has no war value in Europe," he said, adding that Germany was building dirigibles for peace-time work only.

MONTANA TO VOTE IN PRIMARY TODAY

Bitter Democratic Campaign Centers on Candidacy of Jerry O'Connell.

By WILLIAM McMENAMIN. United Press Staff Correspondent. HELENA, Mont., July 18.—(UP)—A bitter Montana Democratic primary campaign closed tonight with the New Deal issue clearly drawn around the candidacy for renomination of Congressman Jerry J. O'Connell, Democrat, Montana.

Montana citizens vote tomorrow. The colorful Irish political figure was scheduled to end his campaign tonight in the traditional manner of Montana liberals, with a speech from the balcony of the Butte hotel to an audience of thousands of miners, smelters and townspeople.

Governor Elmer Benson, of Minnesota, Farm Laborite, came to talk in his behalf.

O'Connell is opposed by a conservative Democrat, Payne Templeton, Helena, former president of the Montana Education Association.

Templeton carried the backing of United States Senator Burton K. Wheeler.

O'Connell, 28-year-old son of a Butte miner, is believed to have an eye on the senate seat now held by Wheeler.

O'Connell has the backing of the "Montana Council for Progressive Political Action," formed at Great Falls this spring. The council claims to control 60,000 labor votes.

Moon Faces Rich as Crackers, Peps Finish Series Tonight

All in the GAME

by Jack Troy

Whatever became of those two pitchers and that hard hitter the Crackers were supposed to need in order to make any progress in the Southern league race?

BOB DURHAM.

In fact, things haven't been so bad with them on the sidelines—thanks to Durham, Miller, Beckman and Pritchett.

The only two pitchers the Crackers have added to the staff this season have failed to stick. They are Ted Petroskey, the collegian who is now hurling for Jacksonville, and Ralph Buxton, who was returned to the Athletics.

I think they have done pretty well with the original staff, which wasn't supposed to have it in the beginning.

The smartness Manager Paul Richards has shown in the handling of pitchers probably entitles him to be called a "Bill McKeechick of the minors."

Richards makes few mistakes in the nomination of mound-men or in pulling or keeping them in a game.

Leo Moon hasn't started a game in some time. His last appearance was in the All-Star game. He was in good form.

Richards will send Leo, the Lion, to the mound tonight in the final game of the Little Rock series. The Crackers are out for a clean sweep of the four-game set and it's up to the Old Man of the Mountain. He appears ready to turn in a great performance.

SOUTHWORTH'S LAMENT.

When the Memphis Chicks were leaving after their last visit, Manager Billy Southworth commented, "I don't see why anybody should worry about the Crackers."

"They have more good men on the bench than I have on the field." The Chick skipper referred to such players as Buster Chatham, Cecil Dunn and ailing pitchers such as Sunkel and Harris.

Inevitably there is talk of a team that comes from behind and wins narrow victories a lot of the time as being "lucky."

It so happens the Crackers have that extra something which the other teams in the league do not have. They have more spirit, for one thing.

They refuse to recognize odds. To the Crackers a game is never over until the last man is out, regardless of what the score might be against them.

So when they come from behind, it is a matter of spirit and determination to win—not luck. They do it too consistently to have any element of chance involved.

RACE ISN'T OVER.

While the Crackers hold a commanding lead of six and one-half games, the race isn't over by any means. The real fight is just beginning. I mean the holding of the lead with teams like New Orleans, Birmingham and Nashville offering determined opposition.

Little Rock is a good team only when LeRoy Schalk is in the fold. When he's out, the Rocks are no better than second division. And Schalk may get back too late this time to do any good. The defending champions are virtually on the ropes.

The Crackers have one more swing of the circuit to make. They visit all seven towns once more. And naturally they'll be more of a target than ever now.

The Crackers are a great horse to ride in the Southern league derby, but they have a lot of trotting to do yet before they come first under the wire.

On the other hand, it's harder to get on top than it is to stay there. The pressure is on the challenging clubs. The Crackers were a long time climbing to their present position.

MISSUS BY HAIRBREADTH.

Atlantans missed having another champion by less than a second. Or, you might say, by a hairbreadth.

Claude Smith, pride of the Atlanta Motorboat Club, participated in the national outboard races at Kansas City, Mo., last week and finished second to the national champion, Tom Cooper.

Smith's time was only one-tenth of a second slower than Cooper's, who is undisputed champion. Smith was scarcely a boat length behind at the finish of the five-mile championship.

The Motorboat Club of Atlanta, which is growing all the time, rightfully is proud of Smith's splendid performance. Atlanta, an inland city, may win an outboard championship yet.

THE BIG OFFENSIVE.

The big offensive begins at Druid Hills today. The heavy firing in qualifying rounds starts early this morning and will continue through the day.

The battle of bunkers and hills on a course which shows no inclination to yield to the par seekers is very attractive. This is one of the best state tournaments of all.

Four former state champions—Charlie and Dave Black, Bill Zimmerman and Johnny Oliver—are entered in the field, along with Frank Mulherin, the defending champion, from Augusta. Dr. Julius Hughes, twice a runner-up; Billy Eager, medalist in the Southern at Ponte Vedra; Jennings Gordon, runner-up in the Southern; Tommy Barnes, southern intercollegiate champion; Jack Cook, Atlanta amateur champion, and many other fine players will seek the crown.

Bobby Dodd is trying his luck. And if he can only have the luck of his coaching chief, W. A. Alexander, he may bob up as a dark horse. Maybe it's wrong to call Coach Alex's hole-in-one at East Lake Sunday luck, however. He has been trying too many years to get one.

State Stars Sharpen Game On the Green

Qualifying rounds for the annual Georgia state golf tournament begin this morning at Druid Hills. The course was crowded with talent yesterday. The picture above shows two former

Par Seekers Open Rivalry This Morning

FOUR EX-CHAMPS AND TITLIST PLAY AT DRUID HILLS

18-Hole Test Slated Today; Match Play Begins Wednesday.

By ROY WHITE.

Qualifying rounds for Georgia's 21st annual amateur championship golf tournament will be played today over the sun-baked and rolling Druid Hills golf course. It will be an 18-hole preliminary test. The low 32 scorers will constitute the championship division and open the dual battles Wednesday morning.

A near-record field of 175 of the state's outstanding players had signed the register late Monday—and the deadline was several hours off. In fact entries will be received today as long as time will permit the playing of 18 holes before dark.

There is no limit as to the entries, and every player will be included in the tournament, regardless of scores. Five divisions already have been assured, with another expected to be completed today.

WIDE OPEN FIELD.

It's a wide-open field with any one of a dozen players having an equal chance to crash through. There is not a standout in the tournament. And only those who have won tournaments before and with experience can be safely placed in the favorites' circle. It's a great chance for some dark horse to come through.

Frank Mulherin, the Augusta sharpshooter, is the defending champion. And he has plenty of support with a half dozen Augusta players ready to contest the title.

Four former champions, Bill Zimmerman, Augusta; Johnny Oliver, Valdosta, and Dave and Charlie Black Jr. must be given consideration in the favorites' role.

Tommy Barnes, Atlanta's open champion and Southern Intercollegiate champion; Jack Cook, Atlanta's amateur champion; Dr. Julius Hughes, twice runner-up in the state and a former city open and amateur champion, and Charlie Edwards, runner-up in the city amateur last year, are outstanding Atlanta players.

Dan and Alan Yates are playing mighty good golf at present and will be tough to beat.

Billy Eager, Valdosta, medalist in the Southern Amateur at Ponte Vedra; Jennings Gordon, of Rome, runner-up in the Southern Amateur; Alvin Everett, the long-driving southpaw from Rome; and Horace Wright, Athens, medalist in the National Open sectional qualifying at East Lake, are out-of-town "tough customers."

It's probably the best balanced entry list ever recorded for a state tournament and it would be impossible for anyone to attempt to name a winner.

And from the scores in the practice rounds Sunday and Monday, it looks like a 79 to 80 will make the championship division.

The Sunday and Monday scores were far from encouraging. Prospects for more hot and dry weather also do not add to the low scoring chances.

Two outstanding threesomes will tee off at 9 o'clock and 9:07: They are: Dr. Hughes, Scott Hudson Jr. and John Oliver; and Jennings Gordon, Bill Zimmerman and Joe Horacek Jr.

Frank Mulherin will not qualify and will be given the No. 1 position in the championship division playoffs.

Team competition will be plenty tough with almost every club in the state of any size having a worthwhile team.

There are only six available starting times between 7:30 and 3:30 o'clock left. They are 7:30, 11:27, 11:48, 11:55, 12:02 and 12:09.

Late starters today must communicate with Paul Duke, the starter, as soon as possible.

Moon Faces Rich In Tonight's Game

Crackers Seek Sweep of Four-Game Series at Ponce de Leon.

By JACK TROY.

Leo Moon will make his first start in several weeks as the Crackers, leading the Southern league by six and one-half games, seek to sweep the series with Little Rock in the final game tonight.

It's Leo's night and the game will begin at 8:30. Doc Prothro, who has seen his Pebbles knocked from second to third place in the standings in the series, will send Woodrow Rich, his ace right-hander, to the mound in an effort to salvage the final game.

The Crackers are only getting even for the treatment they received on the last trip to Little Rock. They dropped three out of four games there and their revenge will be complete if they can make it four straight tonight.

DUNN AT FIRST.

Cecil Dunn will continue at first base, Manager Paul Richards said yesterday. Jack Bolling will be out for a few more days because of his injured leg.

Richards' hand is hurt and Dewey Williams will handle the catching for the Crackers. The last time Moon appeared on the mound was in the All-Star game. He was in fine fettle, so to speak, and should be ready to go back tonight.

The Crackers have made as much headway as they can against Little Rock. In order to gain more ground it will be necessary for Nashville to lose if Atlanta wins tonight. Another Pebble loss simply would drop Doc Prothro's charges lower in the standings, if New Orleans should win.

PEBS DROP.

It is possible for Little Rock, coming here in second place, to depart in fourth place with Birmingham, in fifth, breathing on the Travelers' necks.

In all fairness to the Pebbles, however, the loss of Second Baseman Leroy Schalk has brought about some of their troubles. It's a different ball club with Schalk in the game.

If Manager Richards changes his mind as to the starting pitcher at the last minute, Larry Miller will go to the mound for Atlanta. Miller, however, has not had his regular rest. And the Crackers, too, have a couple of double-headers to play with Chattanooga here this week.

Mister Moon reasonably can be expected to stop them.

King's Physician Backs Operation On 15-Year-Old Assault Victim

LONDON, July 18.—(AP)—Baron Horder, physician to King George VI, headed tonight a brilliant array of medical talent backing Dr. Aleck William Bourne, one of London's foremost obstetricians, in his Old Bailey trial for keeping a 15-year-old assault victim from motherhood.

Testifying in a test case through which medical circles hoped to bring more liberal legislation, Horder defended on humanitarian grounds the operation performed by Dr. Bourne.

Admitting it was unusual for him to express an opinion without examining the patient, the famous physician said that "as far as I can judge, the facts would have led me to the same conclusion as Dr. Bourne."

Dr. Bourne, accused of performing an illegal operation on the young girl, victim of assault by soldiers, deliberately sought to be prosecuted in an effort to liberalize the medical laws. London's most fashionable physicians and socialites jammed the old court for the trial.

The jury includes two women. The trial will be resumed tomorrow.

Dr. Bourne disclosed in his own testimony that he had performed a similar operation in 1935 on another 15-year-old girl and that the house surgeon refused to assist him. He said he decided that on the next occasion he would get a court ruling.

"That's why we are here," Dr. Bourne said.

Officers Boot Tale Of Kicking on Tin

Knocking on wood is regarded by the superstitious as a panacea for warding off evil, but kicking on tin proved disastrous for Brownie A. Lasseter, of Fayette county.

Arrested with Jesse Lee Pearson on a charge of illicit distilling, Lasseter yesterday told Commissioner E. S. Griffith that noises attributed to him by Alcohol Tax Unit officers as emanating from preparations to "make a run" were the result merely of his kicking a piece of tin which lay in his path.

Officers testified that the noise led them to two 1,000-gallon and one 500-gallon "ground hog" stills, where they found mash ready for distillation.

The two men were bound over to the grand jury under bonds of $500 each and remanded to jail in default.

Bob Wright, of Athens, who was eliminated in the Soap Box Derby zone final in Monroe, was not disqualified for interfering with another driver, H. M. Van Devender, derby director, said yesterday.

He wired headquarters from Atlanta announcing outright purchase of two veteran infielders and said he hoped to land a hard-hitting outfielder before the close of the week.

Added to the Traveler roster were Russell Maxcy, second baseman from St. Paul of the American association, and Lou Brower, shortstop from Oklahoma City of the Texas league. Both will join the Pebs Wednesday at Memphis.

Maxcy played with Chattanooga in 1935 and has been in the International and American association since. He can play either second base or shortstop.

"Most of our games are going at shortstop or second base," asserted Prothro. "Neither Snyder or Heyer are playing good ball. However, the season is just a little past midway and we intend to make a new try. I believe we can come back, especially if we can obtain an outfielder who can hit."

Prothro had no alibis for loss of six games out of seven starts on the current road trip. Two of his mainstays are on the injured list.

R. I. GOVERNOR HITS DIXIE'S PARITY PLEA

Quinn Tells I. C. C. Move Would Result in 'Dislocation of Industry.'

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 18.—(AP) Governor Robert E. Quinn, of Rhode Island, urged the Interstate Commerce Commission today to deny a southern application for lower freight rates, on the ground that such a move would result in "dislocation of industry."

"Governor Quinn was the third chief executive of a northern state to take the witness stand in an I. C. C. hearing on the southern complaint. Governors Lehman, of New York, and Townsend, of Indiana, preceded him last week.

"It would result in the destruction of enormous capital investment," Quinn asserted as he opposed the south's demands for "parity" on northbound goods.

"The whole country would suffer a loss," he said, "if as the result of this proposed move industry would be required to relocate for no other reason than to fit itself into the new conditions suddenly created."

Southern interests are seeking on northbound shipments within their freight classification area a mile-for-mile parity with rates existing within the northern, or "official" classification area.

Surprise Birthday Party Honors Mrs. W.A. DuPre at Marietta Club

By Sally Forth.

YESTERDAY was Mrs. William A. DuPre's birthday, and her daughter, Mrs. Banks DuPre, gave her a grand surprise party at the Marietta Golf Club which was outstanding for its originality and beauty, according to one of Sally Forth's scouts. The honor guest is one of Marietta society's most popular and beloved members, as you know, and more than a hundred of her friends from over the state assembled to greet her on her birthday.

The clubhouse was adorned for the occasion with quantities of summer garden flowers, the blossoms displaying the colors appearing in the Banks family coat-of-arms. Mrs. DuPre is the former Lelia Banks, charming representative of one of the state's most prominent families. Emphasizing the crest motif was a painting of the coat-of-arms which hung over the mantel in the club living room.

The party was a complete surprise to the honor guest, who did not recognize that it was a compliment to her until she saw the bouquet of gardenias marking her place at the luncheon table. Most appropriately, the place cards were miniature copies of "Banks of Elbert," which contains the family tree of Mrs. DuPre, complete even to the names of her two sons, William DuPre, of Rome, and Banks DuPre, of Marietta. Marking the guests' places as favors were miniature bouquets, further repeating the colors in the family crest, which were made by Mrs. H. H. Morrisette, close friend of the honor guest. Following luncheon, the guests played bridge.

Assisting the hostess in entertaining was a group of her intimate friends, including Mrs. William DuPre, of Rome; Mesdames Robert Northcutt, Bolan Glover, Tom Mitchell, George Dozier, Howard Coryell, Berryman Edwards, Allen Brown and Evelyn Darnell.

Guests from Atlanta were Mesdames James L. Mason, William Sibley, D. B. Donaldson, C. C. Stockard, J. W. Stipe, G. P. Carmichael, Robert Latta, Jack Fall, Dennis Paschall, J. C. Findley, Georgia K. Sullivan, Misses Laura Kreeger and Margaret Stipe.

Friends of Mrs. DuPre from other cities who were present included Mrs. Rafe Banks, of Gainesville; Mrs. Hody Blair, of Clearwater, Fla.; Mrs. J. J. Flynn, of Griffin; Mrs. R. H. Patterson and Mrs. J. E. Hutchins, of Covington; Mrs. W. B. Hollingsworth and Louise Hollingsworth, of Fayetteville; Mrs. Sue Walton, of Cartersville; Mrs. Philip Burwell, of New Orleans; Mesdames L. M. King, Frank Kimball, John Appleton, Mandeville, Horace Stewart, T. A. Herndon, Pomp Schaeffer, Shirley Boykin, Mary Bickford, Howell Burns, Frank Thomason, Sam Boykin, J. G. Cheney, Vern Folds, Ruth Kramer and Cornelia McLean, all of Carrollton.

When Raymur Grant again sets foot on American soil today, she will be joyfully greeted by her mother, Mrs. Spottwood Grant, who has gone east for the occasion and who has planned a glorious week in New York in honor of her daughter's homecoming. It is to be a week of shopping expeditions and interesting plays, to be followed by a sojourn of the popular pair in Washington, D. C., as the guests of those former Atlantans, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Ransom and their son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Sturgis, the latter having been Barbara Ransom before her marriage.

Raymur has been studying languages at the Cours Maintenon, at Cannes, France, for the past year and for the last month taking a course in journalism at the University of Paris—a study which she plans to continue in the good old U. S. A. During her interesting six months abroad she passed many week ends as the guest of her cousins, Birdie and Olive Pratt, at their chateau on the Seine river just outside of Paris, and from Raymur's letter, Sally hears that Birdie is becoming quite well known for her beautiful lyric soprano voice and is constantly in demand to sing over radio hook-ups.

DELIGHTING a host of Atlanta friends will be the arrival here on Saturday of Mrs. Frederick Anderson Ware and her small son, Freddy Jr., of Dallas, Texas, to visit the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howell Cobb Erwin, on Park lane. Mrs. Ware is the former Runa Erwin, whom you doubtless remember as one of the most popular and delightful members Atlanta society has ever known.

Runa and her handsome husband went to Dallas to live last year, following a six-year residence in Melbourne, Australia, and this marks their first visit here since they have been making their home in Texas. The latter will motor to Atlanta to join his wife and young son about the middle of August, and later the trio will go to the North Carolina mountains for a month's stay.

While in North Carolina they plan to visit Mr. and Mrs. Ed Street and their daughter, Mrs. Sophie Street Anderson, in Asheville. Sophie, you will recall, served as Runa's matron of honor when the latter became the lovely bride of Fred Ware, the two former belles having been intimate friends during Sophie's residence in Atlanta.

Programs Outlined for Day Camps To Be Held by Camp Fire Girls

Two day camps will be held this week for Camp Fire Girls with a full program of camp activities planned for each day. Today all groups are invited to meet with the new group which was organized at Red Oak last week. The camp will be held at the home of the guardian, Miss Ann Lively, starting at 10:30 o'clock with swimming in the private pool. Each girl will bring a picnic luncheon, bathing suit and towel. Girls from groups in College Park, Hapeville, East Point and West End are invited to be present.

An imaginary trip to the beach will be the theme of the Thursday day camp at Avondale. The entire program will be held around the swimming pool, starting at 10 o'clock and lasting until 3 o'clock. Swimming instruction will be given and tests will be passed by Miss Claudell Yates, Red Cross lifesaver, after which water games will be played. An initiation into "The Mystic Daze at the Sea" will be held by the girls from Kawata group, under the leadership of Mrs. J. Y. Wilson. This will be followed by a picnic luncheon under the umbrellas around the pool, and a rest hour, with sun baths and singing "Songs of the Sea." Games suggestive of the seashore will be played and a final swim will close the program.

Last week at Lunita lodge all girls made smoke prints, spatter prints and blueprints of leaves and flowers. Several earned honors in nature lore for making 10 prints of different kinds of leaves and others were inspired by their start on the honor.

On Thursday others completing swimming tests include Charmain Martin, Emmagene Wilson, Josephine Moore, Mary Lawrence for pollywog or first rank; and Barbara DeLoach, Charmain Martin and Jeannette Glass for frog, or second rank. A demonstration was given by the lifeguard at the pool on artificial respiration and the girls practiced what they learned, with his supervision.

A class will be held on Friday at 10 o'clock at Camp Fire headquarters for those desiring to make beaded headbands. Reservations should be in by Thursday, at Walnut 3738, for this instruction.

MY DAY +

By Eleanor Roosevelt

ROCHESTER, Minn.—"Why do you go away?" Why, indeed! I wonder a little myself, for I have been living at Hyde Park for some time and I find that when you accustom yourself to staying in more or less the same environment, it becomes increasingly difficult to take off easily on trips of any kind. The fact that I enjoy my peaceful life and that I have two grandchildren to use as an excuse for staying at home makes departure doubly hard.

I did want to see my son James, however, so I told the children that I would be gone only three days, and that I really had to go—which was convincing to myself if not to the children. At 5 o'clock Friday afternoon I actually got into my car and, with my briefcase and a small bag, started for New York. The drive down was uneventful, except that I found it hard to keep awake. I reached my apartment in New York in very good time. After telephoning the airport to find out that the weather was good and my reservation made, I went to a little restaurant on a corner near by to get dinner.

I try to think, when I sit at one of those tables on the street, with only the make-believe hedge between me and the passer-by, that I am sitting at a table somewhere in Paris. But the illusion is poor, though it's easier in downtown New York than anywhere else.

I didn't have long, however, to try to imagine myself somewhere else, for I hardly was seated before a young woman came dashing up to me and said that she was Jane, a friend of Anne's, and she hoped I would remember the time we had met at Rhinebeck. My memory was hazy but refreshed itself rapidly as we talked. Then—no sooner had she moved than another lady came and sat opposite me. This time it was someone I knew well, and I became engrossed in her difficulties and spent over an hour at dinner.

Then back to my apartment to read the evening paper and write letters until 12:30, when I left to board the bus for the airport.

I find sitting in an airport station, watching people come in, a very entertaining occupation. First, a man arrived alone, without luggage and with a walk that indicated this trip was nothing new. Then a man and a woman appeared. The woman was bent on making an impression. Another man and a woman arrived. In this case the lady seemed indifferent. Finally, two ladies with a man. What do all these people mean to each other; where have they come from; where are they going?

We took off from Newark airport at 12:45 a. m., and I was so weary that I tilted my chair back and went to sleep at once. In Detroit the hostess told me that the cameramen and newspapermen would like to see me. I could only reply myself long enough to say, "I am not on an official trip, and I have no story"—and back to sleep.

The sunrise came just before we reached Chicago—always a beautiful scene from a plane.

FRIENDLY COUNSEL

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondents invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield in care The Atlanta Constitution.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

I am a widow who has moved from the north to the south and being lonely I grasped the opportunity of making friends with a bachelor. For two years now he has averaged three meals a week at my home, taken me to expensive restaurants very frequently, always letting me pay the bills. He prefers to ride in my car, but if this isn't convenient he expects me to pay for the gas in his car. He makes a good living but he doesn't spend it. I am a sweet-natured, responsive person and have put up with this because we are congenial and have had good times together. But I am getting enough. I would like to have an outsider sum up the situation and tell me what to expect. Is it possible that southern men are accustomed to letting women pay the bills?

HAZEL.

ANSWER:

Hazel, I believe you will find plenty of deadbeats north and south of the Mason and Dixon line and I'm quite sure geography plays no part in their dead-beating proclivities. Being a widow with some experience you should know that two years is long enough for any man to make up his mind about marriage, and if he hasn't mentioned the subject it's because he's "agin it."

You should know, too, that his car parked before your door is the same as a police sign which reads "Parking Prohibited in This Space." So if you want to get married again you'd better remove the sign. If you don't want to get married but would like to have some turn-about-fair-play friends the quicker you dismiss the deadbeating bachelor the better, for he will scare off all comers.

Summing up the situation, you, a lonely widow, have permitted a sponging bachelor to monopolize your time, eat your food, wear out your chairs, use up your gas, in return for which he has bestowed upon you the pleasure of his company, no longer an unmixed pleasure. And I should say that to save your self-respect you will have to put a summary end to his sponging.

Just take down the free lunch signs, wait off next time the waiter brings the restaurant checks, put your car in the garage and your money in your stocking. Of course, he will check out as soon as he's convinced that the exchequer is closed against him, which is a consummation devoutly to be wished.

Turn a lonely woman out to graze and she'll take thorns and thistles, skunk cabbage and wild onions, all in stride. But the funny part of it is that she is surprised when she can't assimilate them.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

HEALTH TALKS

By DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

POPULAR MISCONCEPTIONS OF PHYSICAL FITNESS.

The one young man among a group of two dozen or more I had to reject for physical deficiency had the largest chest expansion of the lot, about five inches, yet he was in the first stage of pulmonary tuberculosis. Another young man asked me whether his chest expansion, six inches, will shorten his life or anything like that. Apparently the young man was proud of his freak knock. Of course it has nothing to do with health, physical fitness, immunity or longevity. It would be more significant to know how long the young man can hold his breath. His chest expansion is two or three times greater than that of the ordinary healthy young man or even a well trained athlete. I'd like to wager he can't hold his breath half as long as the average normal man can.

A healthy person, sitting at rest, without preparation, should be able to take a moderately full breath and hold it without difficulty for 40 seconds. If the breaking point is much shorter than 40 seconds, the individual needs the attention of a physician. With preparation, that is, by first taking a dozen moderately deeper breaths but without straining at all, a healthy person should be able to hold his breath for 1 1/2 to 2 minutes. One who first takes half a dozen or more full breaths of pure oxygen can hold his breath immediately afterward for several minutes. Some students breathed pure oxygen for a few minutes and then held their breath over 13 minutes.

The breath-holding time is a better test of physical fitness or condition than is the chest expansion or even the measurement of vital capacity. Vital capacity is the amount of air one can breathe out after the deepest possible inspiration, as measured by the spirometer, a form of gasometer adapted for the purpose. The average vital capacity of men is a little less than a gallon, and that of women is half a pint less than that of men. The reason why breath-holding is the best index of fitness or condition is because it depends on the efficiency of the respiratory apparatus, that is, the capacity of the blood to carry oxygen, the capacity of the circulation to carry the blood, and the capacity of the cells of the body to use the oxygen and exchange their load of carbon dioxide for it. In other words breath-holding is a gauge of metabolism.

Freak physical culture systems or methods involving exercises of effort, such as lifting heavy weights, overdevelop the skeletal muscles, but such hypertrophied muscles become parasites on vitality which is sapped for their nourishment. The ill-advised course of training fails to develop constitutional vigor at the same time, fails to train the heart and the circulation to cope with increased demands for oxygen and for fuel, invites early physical breakdown and prematurely senility or death.

Sound physical training, or perhaps we should say physical education, develops constitutional vigor, promotes physical efficiency and longevity.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Under the Sky.

Sons 11 and 13 slept last summer on open porch with roof over them. This summer they want to sleep in cots on lawn with sky as roof. Blankets almost drenched with heavy dew last nights here. Will sleeping in the open harm them? (Mrs. M. C. J.)

Answer.—No. If they enjoy it sleeping in the open is fine for them.

Old Woman.

Noticed inquiry in your column "Is woman of 40 too old to have her first baby?" As a woman of 39 who has just had her first I say "No!" No prettier, more intelligent or healthier baby can be found than mine. I myself am in far better health than I have known in years. If all women of 40 could see me and my baby all hesitations and doubts on that score would be removed. (D. F. E.)

Answer.—That's the trouble. Instead of seeing normal folk like you and your baby they see and hear Mrs. Sumsey, Saireygamp and Ben Told.

Lemons.

Is it injurious to health to take the juice of two lemons daily?

Answer.—If you like lemon juice or lemonade, it is healthful to take as much as you like daily. Of course it will not reduce any more than taking other fruit or fruit juice reducers. Don't be so credulous. Send 10 cents coin and stamped envelope bearing your address, for booklet "Design for Dwindling." If you wish to reduce in the physiological, healthful way.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME

By IDA JEAN KAIN.

An effective waistline exercise is shown by Mary Howard, attractive Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer actress. To do it sit on the floor with trunk erect and arms straight out at the side. Swing the body at the waist from side to side, twisting as far around as possible.

back against the wall, hands on Coffee, clear hip and legs extended.

Movement: Flatten the lower back against the wall by contracting the abdominal muscles and the gluteal muscles of the buttocks. Hold, release, and repeat 10 times. In this position the lumbar curve is straightened and the pelvis is tilted correctly, with the trunk at a right angle to the thigh.

To increase the difficulty of the exercise, sit away from the wall with knees flexed so that the soles of the feet are flat on the floor. Contract and relax the gluteal muscles, always lifting upward with the lower abdominal wall.

The muscles of the abdomen are especially in need of exercise following the arrival of the baby. Unless you take the precaution of special exercise for these stretched muscles your figure will look perceptibly older.

Bridge Lite

By HAROLD SHARPSTEEN

This is the second of a special series of articles explaining, in simple language, how to recognize and execute the squeeze.

SQUEEZE SITUATIONS.

When one defending opponent must guard winners in two different suits in order to prevent declarer from establishing lower-ranking cards to the position of winners in those suits, he is in a position to be squeezed.

If declarer is able to make a lead which will force that opponent to discard and thereby relinquish control over one of declarer's two losers, the squeeze will be successful because opponent will automatically be forced to sacrifice a winner of his own and promote one for declarer's side.

"BUSY" CARDS.

What actually happens when a simple squeeze is successfully applied against one opponent is best explained by the following elementary examples illustrating the basic principles of a natural squeeze situation.

(1) (2)

H—J 7 6 S—A K Q

N—Q 3 2—W S—3 2—W

S—H—A K 8 S—7 5 4

(1) Each of West's three hearts have a definite duty to perform. The Queen, because it will win a third-round trick. The trey and deuce because they are precious guards to the Queen.

If West is forced to give up either small card, the Queen will fall on the first two rounds of hearts and dummy's jack will win the third trick. For all practical purposes the deuce is just as valuable as the Queen and in the Culbertson system of squeeze plays, West's three hearts are termed "busy" cards.

"IDLE" CARDS.

(2) West's three spades, worthless before North's A-K-Q, may be well considered "idle" cards. So long as an opponent holds "idle" cards he cannot be squeezed, for obviously, while "idle" cards remain in his hand he will not be under the embarrassing pressure to discard "busy" ones.

(1) (2)

S—J N—H—2

S—Q W—E H—A W—E

N—N W—S

E—D—Q J

S—D—A 10

(1) West must retain the Spade Queen as long as North holds the Jack.

(2) With no other hearts outstanding, West must hold the Ace so long as North retains the deuce.

(3) East cannot discard a diamond or South will cash both his Ace and ten.

When and how is an opponent forced to discard a "busy" card?

ENTERTAIN WITH CLEVER

FORTUNES;

EASY AND FUN TO LEARN HOW

BE A HIT ON PICNICS, PARTIES, DATES.

Ted's fascinated as Jane hits the high spot of his fortune: "The most thrilling date of your life is just around the corner—that ace of clubs says."

Jane knows a girl needs an "extra something" to queen it at the beach and at parties—and fortune-telling is an easy and jolly "extra."

You can quickly pick up card meanings—speak brightly about the legacy promised by the ten of diamonds, the romance hinted by the queen of hearts, the quarrel threatened by the four of spades.

To add to the glamour, use the mystic nine way of revealing your fate's fortune.

Tell him to draw nine cards—taking the first or key card with his left hand. If it's a heart his future will be rosy. The next two are the wish cards. If one's the nine of hearts, his wish certainly comes true.

The three cards that follow are position or prestige cards. If they're high—a high position in life. The next two are marriage cards. If one's an ace, storm clouds; if a court card, happiness. The last card foretells health—if high, good.

And here's a grand fortune game, "Desert Sand," that you can play at the beach or at home.

Bury little gadgets in a pile or a box of sand—a glass bead for romance, a pencil for literary fame, a ring for a wedding. Let each fortune-seeker dig for a gadget—then you reveal its meaning with a prophetic air.

SPORTS FROCK WITH A

GAY BOLEERO.

Every report of fashion seen at the races and country clubs makes much of boleros and vivid colors in cottons, and boleros in stripes are considered extremely smart. The dress of the ensemble shown today has exactly the right casual lines. It is made with a deep V-neck, short tailored sleeves and a straight skirt, and has a wide inset, like a cummerbund, at the waistline to match the bolero. This is a practical design, especially for summer travelers, because both the bolero and the frock may be worn separately.

Rustic linen is a very smart, new choice for this design in natural color or white for the dress, and blazing stripes for the bolero. It will also be smart in gingham, pique or sports silk.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1538-B is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding measurements 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 14 (32) requires 3 1/2 yards of 35-inch material for skirt and blouse; 2 1/8 yards for bolero, tie belt and insert.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:

William Ballard, an engineer successful as an inventor, waits alone in his San Francisco office hoping that his youngest daughter, Joyce, will keep a half promise to walk home with him. When she falls him, he goes to his big house in St. Francis Wood to find his wife, Sarah, Joyce and Felicity, the oldest daughter, frantically discussing the fact that Dora has gone to the golf club with Devereaux Patterson. Joyce has to smile when she finds herself making a rosy picture of the Patterson-Ballard wedding.

INSTALLMENT IV.

That had been Sunday. This was Wednesday, and he had come to call this afternoon. Big and lean and brown and infinitely attractive, he had been here by the fire for an hour, not wanting any tea; no, not anything else, just wanting to jabber in his delightful idiotic way, and ask her if her people came up to the lake in summer, and where she had been all his life, and things like that. Oh, it was too thrilling!

Joyce's breath was taken away. This was the way things happened, was it? You met a boy at a tea, a delightful rich boy just home from college, oh, this was better than all her wildest dreams, and Paul was simply adorable! Joyce could hardly wait for dinner to be over and the evening to get itself somewhat spent, so that she could be alone in her room, to dawdle over her undressing, thinking about him, and finally to jump into bed and go on thinking about him in the dark.

Because of all this she could not pay much attention to what her father was saying. It was not important anyway. It was merely that Archie's father had come to see him in the office. Joyce was conscious that her father said something and said something else, and was still, rustling the pages of his paper, she contentedly lapsed back into her own thoughts.

Later when she was undressing her mother came into her room. "Sit down, darling," Joyce said, springing into bed, jerking the covers up, settling herself for a chat. "Dad got out?"

"No, he's still reading the paper," Mrs. Ballard said. "He was telling me—I don't suppose it means a thing!"

"Mother, did you see Paul von Schwerin? Isn't he cute?"

"He seems a very nice boy," "I met him at Margaret's cousin's. I had no idea he was coming up, mother," Joyce said earnestly, "is there any chance of our going up to Tahoe this year?"

"Oh, darling, I don't think so. Not with Lissy's wedding and all. Daddy says we'll have to economize dreadfully for months and months! Archie's father called on Dad in the office today," she added.

"What about?" Joyce asked.

"I don't know that I ought to tell you this," her mother said hesitatingly. "It's just that it seems—so queer, Joyce, a man couldn't break his engagement at this point, could he? I mean a man like Archie?"

Joyce stared at her mother, reddened eyes wide in astonishment. "Good heavens, no!"

"Well, of course he couldn't!" Mrs. Ballard said hastily.

"You don't mean he went in to break the engagement? Why, the invitations are going to be out next week!"

"No, no, it wasn't that. He didn't... well, it was funny," Mrs. Ballard said. "He wanted your father to put some money into his business. He suggested that Dad invest about—I don't know how much, I think it was twenty-five thousand for Lissy."

"Ha!" Joyce ejaculated non-committally, a little premonitory chill at her heart. "And is Dad going to do it?"

"He says he can't."

"I think old Ross has a nerve!" Joyce said, after thought.

"It isn't that, exactly. It's the European idea. They're Scotch, you know."

"I never heard the Scotch do it! Wedding portion, hey?" Joyce mused. "Does Lissy know?"

"Oh goodness, no! And she mustn't No-o-o," Mrs. Ballard said musingly. "It really doesn't mean a thing. But he suggested that Dad invest this money for Lissy. He said that he had no suspicion that his son was all ready to marry a rich American girl, that Archie had been expected to marry his brother's daughter in Edinburgh—something like that. Evidently there was some sort of family misunderstanding or something. Dad said that Lissy wasn't rich—I don't know, I imagine it was all rather embarrassing and—funny. At the end he said that he hoped there wouldn't be any need for Archie to go to Scotland right away..."

"Oh, fun for Lissy!"

"No, he meant before they're married."

It was out. Mother and daughter faced each other; Joyce's cheeks grew red.

"He couldn't!" she said with a glance in the direction of Lissy's room. "It's February now. They're going to be married in four weeks."

"I don't see how he could. But Dad said he spoke as if some business arrangement had to be made with the family at home; he said his brother had money to invest."

"It would seem to me—" Joyce said cautiously, although she knew that Lissy and Archie were at the Palmer's dinner, and could not possibly overhear her, "that the best thing for Dad to do would be to get the money somewhere, and invest it for Lissy! I mean it's nervous of him to force us into it, and it would make Lissy boil—she'd break the engagement if she ever found out!"

"Well, don't you bother your precious head about it tonight," Mrs. Ballard exclaimed suddenly.

"It'll all come out right, and Lissy'll be married next month." She stood up. "Devereaux Patterson's going around the world," she said.

It was another shock. Joyce looked at her mother with bright, stricken eyes and said nothing. "He told Dodo so today."

"Dodo feel badly?"

"I imagine she does. He's to be gone a year. His uncle is giving him the trip. 'Tis too bad," Sarah Ballard said simply.

"Yes," Joyce agreed briefly. "It's too bad."

"Of course there never was anything serious between him and Dodo," Mrs. Ballard offered heartily. Joyce did not speak. She repeated vaguely: "It's too bad." She gave Joyce a troubled kiss and went away. She had barely left the room before Joyce, with her heart bounding for joy, had snapped off the light, snuggled down in the soft covers, and returned to dreams of Paul.

But that was not the end of the Ross matter. A day or two later Joyce tore herself from her own happy musings to discuss Felicity's affair with her brother.

The one son of the family had to make eight clock lectures at college five days a week; he spent that time in the jumble and noise of fraternity house life. On Saturday and Sundays he was therefore allowed to sleep as late as he liked in their own comfortable room at home. Joyce intercepted Edna in the upper hallway, took the tray from her, and entered Ben's room just as the clocks were striking eleven.

"Wake up, Benjamin my beloved," Joyce said, putting down the tray. "Chester telephoned and he's stopping for you at noon. Where're you going?"

Ben rolled over; rumbled dark hair; yawned luxuriously. "Don't burst in on me with bad news like that!" he said affectionately. "Here, wait a minute, kid!"

He leaped from bed, disappeared into the bathroom, returned after a moment with his wet hair combed and his cheeks cold and fresh from icy water. Joyce had straightened his bed, set his tray conveniently. Re-established, with his back against the pillows, he first took a skimming look at the headlines of the sports pages, flung the paper aside with a satisfied ejaculation and beamed at his sister. "Well, kid, how's everything?"

"Everything's fine. But we think Lissy's wedding's off."

Ben's brown eyes came up suddenly from his tray. "What happened?"

"Oh, everything. You weren't home until late last night or you would have heard some of it. Archie has to go to Scotland. His father came to see Dad and he wanted him to put up some money for his business. Alexander Ross' Sons, you know. The grandfather said it. It's a spinoff, and all that. Well, anyway, Dad said he couldn't. He's sort of hard-up just now, Mother says. So Mr. Ross seemed sort of worried and he said that then Archie might have to go to Scotland for the money; he has a brother there. He said there was a sort of understanding that Archie and one of his cousins would marry, so now he's going!" Joyce finished in some confusion.

UNCLE RAY'S Corner

THE STORY OF RUBBER.
It runs through tubes or veins in the bark of the tree, and is not the same thing as sap. Latex seems to be helpful to the tree because it closes breaks in the bark. In this way it kills or keeps out insect enemies which would like to lay eggs in open places in the bark.

About one-third of the latex is rubber. The rest is mostly water. The latex might be boiled to get rid of the water, but that would hurt the rubber. For the same reason, the rubber would be harmed if placed in sunlight where the water would evaporate.

Long, long ago, natives of Brazil learned a way to get rid of the water and keep the rubber in good condition. This method may be spoken of as "smoking the latex," and it is still used in some places.

Dipping a paddle in the bucket of latex, the worker places it over a smoking funnel. The smoke is produced by burning palm nuts. As the paddle is turned in the smoke, the water in the latex is dried away, and a thin coating of rubber is left on the wood.

Again and again, the paddle is dipped into the latex, then turned in the smoke. At last there is quite a ball of rubber around it.

The rubber balls made in this way differ a great deal in size. Usually they weigh from 10 to 100 pounds. Balls of record size weigh several hundred pounds. One huge ball was made by an Indian and his two sons during a period of five months. It contained 1,118 pounds of rubber. This great ball was placed in a boat by the Indians, and they traveled 25 days down the river before they reached a market town where it could be sold.
